and prohibited to answer them fully. Several of these present then rose up and, addressing the people in the most stirring strains, questioned the Governor in regard to their alleged wrongs, until the whole assembly became so agitated that BRIGHAM, fearing an outbreak, commanded them to keep quiet and respect their new Governor.

The day following the one upon which Gov. CUMMING made this speech, his office was thronged with persons who came to set forth their grievances to him and to implore his protection in leaving the Territory.

He registered in a book the names of 150 persons to whom he promised protection and a free pass from Elsa.

There are already on their way out, the Governor having gathered them together and seen that they were safely started. We now expect their arrival in camp daily.

There is undoubtedly a very large proportion of the Mormons who are dissatisfied and anxious to get out of BRIGHAM'S clutches, but they have been reduced by the leaders to such extreme poverty that they are not able to raise the means to leave, or even to pay their debts; these poor people are suffering terribly. The city itself and all of the northern settlements are entirely deserted. The houses and fences are left in order, but in many instances the doors and windows have been taken out. Those people who were unable to raise the means to move away were furnished with teams by the church, and thus compelled to go. The bishops have, however, remained with a few persons in these deserted villages and the city, to protect the property and take care of the growing crops, or if so directed to burn and destroy all. The Governor has also stationed about 300 men in Salt Lake City, 70 in Ogden City, and others in the smaller villages, for the purpose of guarding the abandoned property.

The foundations of the Temple, which are built exceedingly solid and substantial, have been entirely filled up with dirt, and thus buried. BRIGHAM'S harem, commonly called the Lion House, is fastened up very closely, and the windows are all boarded up.

BRIGHAM YOUNG and HEBER KIMBALL are both building houses at Provo City. BRIGHAM'S house is about 200 feet long, and he has some 100 men busily engaged in its construction. The people are all concentrated in Utah, San Pete and Fillmore Valleys, and are actively engaged in planting and sowing grain and vegetables.

The people are well armed, and guns are offered for sale at low prices.

The printing-office of the Deseret News has been moved from Salt Lake City to Fillmore, and that newspaper is at present published there.

No compromise or peace has yet been effected, but in our opinion the Mormon question is thus resolved:

The leaders have offered to give themselves up for trial, upon a pledge that they shall be tried by a jury chosen from among the Mormons, but they declare that they will never submit to a trial by a Gentile jury. They are still, as they declared from the first, willing to allow the civil officers and civilians to enter the valley and reside there, but they will not submit to have the Army quartered among them.

To these terms they will, I have no doubt, adhere, and will allow the civilians to come among them, but if the army attempt to move into the settlements, or an attempt is made to arrest those indicted for treason, unless it is upon the conditions which they have made, they will resist and fight to the last.

They are now prepared to fight, for they are well armed and equipped, and their families are concentrated.

Their force is variously estimated by those persons who have seen them this Spring, and who are entitled to credit, at from 10,000 to 25,000 fighting men, their numbers having been very largely increased during the Winter by emigrants and returning missionaries from all parts of the world, who have entered by way of California.

Delay is an object which they most earnestly strive to gain at present, for every hour lost by us strengthens them, and to secure this end they will use every imaginable subterfuge.

The mail from the States arrived here on the evening of the 17th inst., together with the Army Express. The former brought us dates to the 27th of March, the latter to the 10th of April.

Nothing affords us more pleasure than the news which it brings of the confirmation of the promotion of Colonel JOHNSTON to the rank of Brevet Brigadier-General.

He most certainly deserves such a reward for the skill and prudence with which he has successfully carried this army, crippled and disabled as it was, through an extremely rigorous Winter, on the borders of an enemy's country, and for the eminent wisdom and ability which he has thus far displayed in the discharge of the responsible duties which have been intrusted to him.

We are also pleased to hear that Congress has at last made some provisions for our relief, and have passed QUITMAN'S bill, authorizing the organization of volunteer regiments for service in Utah.

We know not what to think of the appointment of Peace Commissioners to treat with the Mormons, at this stage of a rebellion so open and treasonable, but, knowing the reputation of the gentlemen to whom has been confided the responsibility involved, we trust that it will in reality only tend to a speedy settlement of the difficulties which seem to arise in the premises as to what does constitute treason.

On the evening of the 16th inst. three wagons belonging to a party of apostate Mormon families, who have been fortunate enough to make their way out of the friendly grasp of the Saints, arrived in camp. The name of the head of the largest family is YANCY; he was originally from Tennessee, and has resided in Salt Lake Valley for a little more than a year. The balance of the party consists of his sons and sons-in-law, and a family named GREEN. They resided near Ogden City, and although they have a pass from Governor CUMMING to come out of the Territory, yet they were stopped and turned back twice whilst they were coming through the Cañons. The second time they were turned back they were stopped under the pretence of mending their wagon until Governor CUMMING came up, when he again started them towards the camp, which they have finally succeeded in reaching. The utter destitution of these poor victims of an [illegible] delusion, was enough to melt into commiseration the hardest heart. One poor soldier, [illegible] only six weeks old, was [illegible] towards unfortunate people as has been shown by the soldiers of our army; they have brought to these persons their clothes, their pots and kettles, in fact everything which they needed. One poor soldier, named LEWIS, brought to Judge EDMUNDS $10, and told him it was all he had, but that he wished that invested for the benefit of these poor women.

It has afforded us an opportunity of witnessing the truth of the fact, that there is not a more humane and kind-hearted person than the American soldier. He has his faults, but he has virtues which completely hide them.

These families report that ninety-nine hundredths of the Mormon population are reduced to a poverty even greater than theirs, for they had the means to leave the Territory, and in this were rich. Many of the women are absolutely naked, and are obliged to clothe themselves like Indian squaws, in old quilts.

We learn from the lips of one of these persons that an old woman and her son, by whom she was supported, living in his neighborhood, were suspected of being "Gentiles;" that one morning, shortly before he left, the old woman was found lying in bed with her throat cut, and her son was found in the garden killed in the same manner. He says that he has repeatedly seen dead bodies, with throats cut, floating down the Jordan River.

They believe that Gov. CUMMING has been grossly deceived by the Mormon leaders. No one could leave the Territory, even with Gov. C.'s consent, unless they had a pass from some Mormon official, and they themselves could not have passed out had it not been that they had a note from HEBER KIMBALL authorizing them to purchase provisions.

The Governor has given directions that the mail for the Mormons which has been accumulating in our post-office in Camp, shall be sent in immediately to the city; he has also requested General JOHNSTON that no hindrance shall be placed by the United States troops upon a free commercial and social intercourse between inhabitants of the Territory.

The scarcity of provisions in our Commissary Department has again become an object of anxiety to us, for we learn by the express that Col. HOFFMAN with the supply train, has been delayed by a severe snow-storm, and cannot reach us before the 5th or 6th of June, and we have not provisions to last us beyond the 1st of June.

Where are all the cattle which were stolen from us by the Mormons last Fall? We see no signs of them coming!

Great indignation is felt towards Mr. BUIT, of the firm of LIVINGSTON, KINSLAND & Co., by his acquaintances in this camp, at a communication made by and published in the New-York Herald of the 23d of February, which they consider as a studied misrepresentation of the truth, made for the purpose of conciliating the Mormons, and of retaining their favor.

On the 20th inst. Rev. STRONG arrived in camp from Salt Lake City with another load of provisions. He reports that all of the families which the Governor had assisted in starting from the Territory, and to whom he had promised protection, have been turned back by the Mormon forces. A. E. C.

[FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Friday, June 25.

The subject of protecting the rights of citizens of the United States over the Nicaragua Transit route occupied the attention of the Administration, and measures will doubtlessly be taken to prevent any improper interference with them by Foreign Powers.

The War Department has received information from General JOHNSTON, but it gives nothing more of interest than what has recently appeared in the newspapers. The army at Camp Scott was waiting for supplies.

Dispatches for General SCOTT having been sent to his head-quarters direct, have not yet reached him in this city.

An important error was made in yesterday's dispatch, in relation to the letter of Mr. DALLAS, of the 8th of June, giving an account of an interview between him and Lord MALMESBURY. It should have read, "Lord MALMESBURY fully accepted the doctrine in the letter of Mr. CASS, of the 10th of April, as sound international law, and in no way conflicting with the treaty of 1842."

Execution of Murderers.

JAMES M'GEE AT BOSTON, AND JEAN BAPTISTE DESFORGES AND MARIE ANNE BELISLE AT MONTREAL.

BOSTON, Friday, June 25.

JAMES MCGEE, alias MCKEE, was hung at 10 o'clock, to-day, in the Rotunda of the Jail, for the murder of Deputy-Warden CALEB WALKER, in the State Prison, about eighteen months ago. Three to four hundred persons witnessed the execution. MCKEE was attended by the Rev. Mr. SPRAGUE, who offered a prayer, and read the service of the Episcopal Church appropriate to the occasion. MCKEE remained stolid and indifferent, as he has been since the sentence. After being pinioned and seated on the trap, Sheriff CLARK read the death-warrant, and informed the culprit if he had anything to say, an opportunity was now offered. He remained silent. The black cap was adjusted, the drop fell, and he died without a struggle.

MONTREAL, Friday, June 25.

JEAN BAPTISTE DESFORGES and MARIE ANNE BELISLE, convicted of murder of CATHERINE PREVOST, at St. Jerome, last Winter, were executed in front of the Jail at 10 o'clock to-day, in the presence of an immense concourse of people. The prisoners confessed their guilt and showed much calmness. This is the first execution in Montreal for 20 years.

The Convention was held in a tent, and about 1,500 persons were present, the spiritualists predominating, but there were also a number of Abolitionists and temperance men. Three trance mediums speak to-night.

Shocking Accident at a Masonic Celebration.

WELLSVILLE, N. Y., Friday, June 25.

A Masonic celebration was held in this place yesterday. After the oration, the meeting adjourned to a large hall for dinner. About seven hundred persons had entered the hall, when about half its floor gave way, precipitating about three hundred of the company to the next floor; and at the same instant the floor above followed, with a quantity of cutters, farming-mills, lumber, &c., burying the mass of people in the ruins. No one was killed, but from forty to fifty persons were wounded, some twenty of them badly. Mr. and Mrs. MERCALF, of Wellsville, Mrs. DANIEL DRAKE, of Independence, Mrs. COLVIN, of Bingham, Pa., and a Mr. JOHNSON, of Friendship, are reported dangerously injured. At noon to-day all the sufferers were alive, and most of them comfortable.

THE GREAT REGATTA.

The Yacht Race Decided---The Rebecca Winner.

The yachts all passed Montauk Point at 20 minutes before 12 o'clock, yesterday; the Rebecca and Madjie being side and side. The fleet took the flood-tide in the Race, through which they rapidly passed, notwithstanding the light breeze from the southward.

Abreast of New-Haven the Rebecca, Minnie and Una had so far the start as to virtually decide the race.

At five minutes before 12, midnight, WM. YULE, Esq., who, with a party of friends, was on board his yacht watching the arrival of the winning boat, saw the flash, and heard the quick resounding report of a gun. Shortly the outlines of a large sloop-yacht were distinguished shooting swiftly across the Sound from Sand's Point.

All was now excitement on board the Glen Cove. In a short time the two approached within speaking distance.

"What yacht is that? asked Mr. YULE.

"The Rebecca quickly answered a voice."

Instantly three cheers were given for the victorious craft with a hearty good will, in which the ladies joined.

The Minnie was reported next behind, at City Island, and the Una next at Captain's Island.

The Rebecca swept by, and at 12¾ o'clock this morning a gun from the stake boat anchored opposite Fort Schuyler announced that she had won the race.

The Rebecca was sailed by LUKE RUSSELL, the Pilot of the Glen Cove.

The night was very pleasant, but the wind light.

A DISTINGUISHED RUSSIAN GUEST ON BOARD THE NIAGARA—MINISTER SEYMOUR'S INTRODUCTION—LETTER FROM CAPTAIN HUDSON.

Correspondence of the New-York Times:

WASHINGTON, Friday, June 25, 1858.

Everything connected with the laying of the Atlantic Cable possesses a peculiar interest at this particular time. Lieutenant the Baron BOYE, who is now on board the Niagara, presented to Captain HUDSON the following letter of introduction from the Hon. THOMAS H. SEYMOUR, our Minister at St. Petersburg:

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
ST. PETERSBURG, Monday, March 29, 1858.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor of making you acquainted with the bearer of this letter, Lieutenant the Baron BOYE, aid-de-camp to his Imperial Highness the Grand Duke CONSTANTINE.

Although he will need no special recommendation from this quarter, there is a duty devolving on me in the present instance which makes it proper that I should briefly notice the object of his visit to the Niagara. It is doubtless known to you already that the President of the United States, on the application of Mr. STOECKL, the Russian Minister at Washington, has consented that one officer of the Imperial Navy of Russia, such as one as his Imperial Highness the Grand Duke CONSTANTINE might be pleased to designate, should go on board the Niagara to witness the laying of the electric cable between Europe and America.

In consequence of that consent, which I have reason to believe was most cheerfully given, Lieutenant BOYE has been designated by His Imperial Highness the Grand Duke CONSTANTINE for the purpose which you have before you. It has, therefore, become my duty, in accordance with advices from the Department of State, that I should furnish the officer with a suitable letter of recommendation to the commander of the Niagara.

The duty thus incurred may be considered, perhaps, as already fulfilled in the statement I have just made, nothing more being required. I am sure by way of inducing Lieutenant BOYE the reception to which he is justly entitled.

The circumstances which have led to the selection of Lieutenant BOYE for the mission with which he is charged, should justify the addition of a few remarks before closing my letter. You will not fail to see in the arrangement I have herein briefly noticed, a gratifying proof of the friendly relations which subsist between the Government of his Imperial Majesty, the Emperor of Russia, and that of the United States. Such a view would, of itself, enhance the pleasure of receiving on the deck of your vessel an officer of the Imperial Navy.

Russia, though at some distance from the shores of the great ocean which it is to be hoped may soon be connected by the electric cable, is not indifferent to the sublime work in which you are about to engage. She sends as her representative, an officer of rank and abilities, one high in the confidence of his distinguished chief, the Grand Admiral of the Russian Navy, that he may be witness to an undertaking which, if successful, will be hailed with joyful satisfaction throughout the civilized world.

In recommending Lieutenant the Baron BOYE to your kind consideration, I not only carry into effect the wishes of President BUCHANAN on the subject, but at the same time discharge a duty in the highest degree agreeable to myself.

Your position in the naval service of our country must have given you opportunity for learning something of the courtesies which officers of the United States Navy have been accustomed to receive from those of the Russian Navy, when the ships of the two nations have come together on distant seas; and no one, I may say, Captain, more fully appreciates the value of such courtesies, or knows better how to return them than yourself.

Respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
THOS. H. SEYMOUR.

To Capt. W. L. HUDSON, U. S. Steamer Niagara.

Captain HUDSON, under date of June 16, writes to the Navy Department as follows:

"I have the honor to report that the telegraphic squadron, consisting of the Niagara, and Her British Majesty's steamers Agamemnon, Valorous and Gorgon, are now under way for the plateau, which we hope to reach, under sail, (it being necessary for the accompanying vessels to husband their coal until we arrive at that point,) in from seven to ten days, or sooner with favorable winds. Arriving at the position designated, we shall avail ourselves of the first propitious moment to splice the cable, get down the light, and separate with care and circumspection, towards the respective places selected for landing the ends of the cable—the Agamemnon and Valorous for the head of Valentia bay, Ireland, and the Niagara and Gorgon for the head of Trinity bay, Newfoundland—which we hope successfully to reach, under the protection of that Almighty Power whose winds and seas obey, about the 1st of July. I avail myself of this occasion to report the continued good health of all on board."

IMPORTANT FROM NEW-GRANADA.

Acceptation of the Cass-Herran Treaty by the House of Representatives.

Probable Concurrence of the Senate.

The schooner Scioto, from Carthagena, New-Granada, on the 27th ult., which arrived at this port on Thursday last, has brought intelligence of considerable importance from Bogota.

Our readers may remember that, by the last California steamer, no late intelligence was received from the interior of New-Granada. The mails had failed—kept back, it was stated, by the Government, in the hope that the announcement of the ratification of the Cass-Herran Treaty might be taken out. This, however, was not the case. The Bogota Mail did not reach Carthagena in time for the British steamer, which left that port per Aspinwall, on the 20th; so the news was received in season for the schooner Scioto, which sailed for New-York on the next day.

By this chance opportunity we have received the following important private letter from Bogota, announcing the acceptation by the New-Granadian House of Representatives of the Cass-Herran Convention in its original form. It was, moreover, expected that the Senate would yield to the feeling of the House, and to the influence of President OSPINA, who has been a warm advocate of the Treaty throughout. The letter, to which we refer, is as follows:

BOGOTA, Thursday, May 13, 1858.

The House of Representatives have accepted, in all its parts, the Cass-Herran Convention; but the Senate have not yet receded from their amendments and modifications. In a few days the two houses will meet in joint ballot, and will finally determine the question. You will probably know the result by the next steamer. Opinions vary as to which party will triumph, but it is considered more than probable that the House of Representatives will carry their point, as the Government will aid them and will bring all its influence to bear upon the ratification of the treaty.

President OSPINA, who has written an able pamphlet on the subject, feels that the stipulations of the Cass-Herran treaty are just; and he will do all in his power to preserve friendly relations between New-Granada and the United States.

Business is very dull.

News from Buenos Ayres.

THE QUARREL WITH URQUIZA—TERRIBLE SHIPWRECK AND LOSS OF LIFE—BUSINESS PROSTRATED.

By the arrival of bark Dawn, Capt. CHASE, we have Buenos Ayres papers to May 12, ten days later than previous advices.

The quarrel between URQUIZA and Buenos Ayres remained in status quo. No further correspondence had taken place between the Governments, but the controversy occupied great space in the newspapers. The people, it is confidently stated, would agree to a reunion with the thirteen other provinces if URQUIZA should give up the Presidency; but they are firm in their determination not to submit to terms so long as he remains at the head of the Republic.

The cordial reception of Señor RECANCOS, the Envoy of Buenos Ayres at the Court of France, had much encouraged the Provincials against URQUIZA'S demands, and the Government of Buenos Ayres was about to send a minister to advocate its cause at the Court of Brazil. URQUIZA had been detected in trying to influence the municipal elections of the Province by corruption, which created much excitement.

The most terrible shipwreck that has occurred for many years in the Rio de la Plate took place on May 9, when the schooner Florda Salto ran upon a sunken wreck on the Banco Chico, while on her passage from Montevideo to Buenos Ayres, and out of thirty-six passengers, most of them people of good family, twelve were lost. The vessel sunk immediately. The survivors were picked up by an Italian bark.

Madame ANNA BISHOP was singing in Buenos Ayres with much success.

Arrived May 10, from Rosario, American brig Volante, PARK PALADIN, New-York.

Cleared May 10, for Paraguay, Catherine Johnston, with coal.

Business continued prostrated. Doubloons, May 12 quoted at 368@365½, at which there were transacted to the amount of $5 77.

News from British Guiana.

INCREASE OF TAXATION—APPLICATION FOR SEPOYS FOR AGRICULTURAL LABORERS, ETC.

By the arrival of the bark Princeton, we have a Demerara Royal Gazette of the 8th instant.

The Colonial Legislature had adjourned. They imposed no new taxes in the place of the old Registration Tax, but materially increased some of those previously in existence; from these sources it was calculated that the deficiency in the revenue would be supplied.

Resolutions for repeating the application made last year for Sepoys for agricultural laborers, and 1,000 of the gravest offenders to be employed on the public works, were carried.

The bark Hopewell had arrived from St. Helena, with 240 Africans, and the screw-steamer Clarendon, from Calcutta, with 336 Coolies, 65 having died on the passage from cholera.

Cleared at Demerara, May 31, bark Evenant, PECKHAM, New-York.

Meeting of the Bar on the Death of Jonathan Miller, Esq.

SPEECHES OF MESSRS. BENEDICT AND HOFFMAN.

Thursday, about noon, in pursuance of a notice to that effect, there was a meeting held in the Circuit Room of the Supreme Court, to pay a tribute of respect to the memory of the late JONATHAN MILLER, Esq. Owing to the extreme heat, probably, the attendance was very small, and there appeared to be but little interest in the proceedings.

The meeting was called to order by JOHN WHEELER, Esq., who called Ex-Judge RUTGERS to the chair, and Mr. LAGOUTE to the post of Secretary. The Judges of the Supreme and Superior Courts, and Court of Common Pleas were requested to act as Vice-Presidents.

PETER Y. CUYLER, Esq., as Chairman of the Committee appointed for that purpose, read certain resolutions in the usual form, sympathizing with the family of the deceased, and resolving that the members of the bar wear the usual badge of mourning during the space of thirty days.

EBENEZUS BENEDICT, Esq., followed with a few remarks, speaking in the highest terms of the deceased and eulogizing his legal lore. He was not a brilliant man, but one possessing rare learning and profound good judgment. By choice he took a quiet and unassuming position, and therefore he had not been so widely known, but it was doubtful if any man in New-York had heard a word against him. He was an earnest, honest, useful lawyer, a conscientious, industrious citizen. When such men pass, it was eminently proper that we should gather together, out of respect to their memory. It was the only occasion when, as a body, the profession gather solemnly, to view true merit and faithfulness. He seconded the motion for the adoption of the resolutions.

JOHN HOFFMAN, Esq., thought that it was well for the young men, as well as those older than the deceased, to pay a tribute to one so well fitted as an example to those rising in the profession. He remembered that from the deceased he had received many of those little attentions which a young lawyer so much prizes, and with which the old men were so little apt to favor them.

Judge RUTGERS, in rising to put the question, commented in all eulogies which had been pronounced.

The resolutions were then passed, and the meeting adjourned.

NAVAL.—The United States sloop-of-war Saratoga, Commander Lanier, sailed on Thursday from Hampton Roads, for the Gulf. She touches at Key West for orders, and to communicate with Commodore McIntosh. The Saratoga takes the young Midshipmen, who have recently passed their examination, and who are to be distributed among the vessels attached to the Home Squadron. Their names are: A. V. Reed, N. Y.; J. A. Howell, N. Y.; G. L. Frank, Ills.; Otis; H. L. Howison, Ind.; G. Dewey, Vt.; J. Bishop, Me.; C. E. Wilde, Pa.; E. M. Hite, N. J.; E. G. Furber, Ohio; W. C. Whittle, Va.; L. C. Hay, Tenn.; C. S. Norris, Ala.; W. A. Kerr, N. C.; J. Grimball, S. C.; A. Kautz, Ohio.—Norfolk Herald, 23d.

"The General Association of Massachusetts held its annual session in Dorchester, on Tuesday, June 22. About 50 clergymen were present. The Western Recorder says from the Congregational Association, which resulted in their opposition to the late action of the West Society. The Rev. Mr. HOLBROOK, of Lowell, was particularly severe. He said the Congregationalists were unanimous in withstanding all innovations to the society. He repudiated the charge that the Congregationalists out West are not sound in doctrine." He said they were more so than those of the East; that the Andover creed would not be regarded as sound "out West."

A christian gentleman, of Brooklyn, has purchased of the American Tract Society stereotype plates of the life of the celebrated Missionary, Bishop HEBER, of Asia. These are to be given to the students graduating in Yale, Williamstown and Amherst Colleges, who have experienced religion the past year, in the hope that the attention of many of these may be turned to the cause of Foreign Missions.

The Tennessee Baptist Association, held on the 12th of June, have taken a step backward in the work of Christian union. They have voted to terminate all exchanges with Pedo-Baptists as ministerial performances. Not one late their ministers ever baptized in Baptism, who has been immersed by a Pedo-Baptist. In this day of union, when the walls of prejudice are removed in so good a degree, when Baptist pulpits and clergymen hail the Pedo-Baptist as a brother, when, in fact, when all sectarian and clergymen hail the brotherhood of man, in unwritten prayers, when the Pedo-Baptist opens the baptistery of Mr. Baptist, baptizes in his own canonicals, and when from Maine to Georgia, from Nantucket to California, [illegible] extended under the banner, "[illegible] be discussed here"—when all this marks the age, the action of the Tennessee Baptists will meet with but little sympathy at least this side of Mason and Dixon's line.

Recent intelligence from Paris, received in this City, states that the American Chapel at Paris, under the charge of the Rev. Mr. BERRY, is quite prosperous. The Queen of Holland, in her recent visit to Paris, was a worshiper in the Chapel. The morning she made her entrée, she was expected; but the ladies asked out in their expensive costumes, were quite rebuked when the Royal lady came in in such a plain and unpretending costume as the servants of our foreign ladies would not wear.

For a long time the Mariners' Church in this City, under the charge of the Rev. CHARLES S. ROSS, has been burdened with debt. One of the last acts of the late ARCHIBALD G. FRANCIS was to subscribe $[illegible] toward the extinction of that incumbrance. The good deed has lived after him; and the other day a rich man of this City saw the book and the subscription in the clear, bold hand of Mr. FRANCIS, and he immediately wrote under it, "Blessed are the dead, &c., and then added his name with a like subscription of $300 attached.

The Bangor Theological Seminary, one of the most useful and successful in the land, has been enabled to add a new and splendid edifice to those already in existence. The foundation stone was laid some a short time since, and the services were performed in by the Rev. Profs. PARK and SHEPHERD and the Rev. Drs. TAPPAN and ADAMS. In the history of self-sacrifice and devotion to the truth, the Professors of this Seminary, may claim the leading place.

Among the sad effects of the storm of the past week was the utter ruin of the Church of the Good Shepherd. This house stood out in the extreme part of New-York, on Fifteenth-street. It had been founded as a free church by the almost superhuman efforts of the Rev. RALPH HOYT. All that he had of time, talent, money, he gave to the great work of his heart. He has been years in this toil. He has gained stone by stone, and rafter by rafter, by importunity, and brought them to their place. He watched the progress as it rose day by day, and as the last stroke of work was done, and the last touch of the painter's brush was laid on, the whole thing, on the day of the dedication, fell to the ground, a mass of unsightly ruins. The loss is not far from $15,000.

A quarrel, at once disgraceful and ridiculous, has long agitated the Church in South Amherst. The Rev. Mr. MESSENGER the Pastor. A part of the people want him to go, and a part want him to stay. Several councils have been called—but the councils have been as much at loggerheads as the Church—one council telling Mr. MESSENGER to go, and the next telling him to stay. The Rev. Mr. MESSENGER, like Lord Nelson's servant, seems to know when he has a good parish, if the people do not know when they have a good Pastor. His removal would end the contest. He inclines to stay.

The Low Church—so called in Pennsylvania—seem to quite regret the defeat of their candidate in the election of the Rev. Dr. BOWMAN. They claim that the Diocese is actually Low Church, but the composition of the votes seems to show an majority of the High Church Party.

ROBERT DALE OWEN, the celebrated infidel, who, while in Congress, opposed so earnestly the choice of a chaplain, has been converted during the past year, to the great joy of the religious community at the West.

It is said that the Rev. Dr. JESSE T. PECK, late of this City, who returned last week to California, will be the candidate for the Episcopacy in that section of the land the coming season.

The proposed project of Dr. IVES, late Bishop of the Episcopal Church of North Carolina, to erect an American Theological Seminary at Rome, for the benefit of those converted Americans who desire to study near the Papal See before they take orders, has failed for the present, owing to the commercial crisis.

The Sunday observance demanded by the laws of the State of New-York, and the attempt to give those laws an explicit enforcement, may make it almost the law under which the Metropolitan Police are acceptable at the present time. In the 11 R. S., 4th edition, p. 81, Sec. 64, making it an offence to "disturb, interrupt or disquiet any congregation or people met for religious worship by profane discourse, by rude and indecent behavior, or by making a noise either within the place of worship, or so near it as to disturb the order and solemnity of the meeting," in the Section that makes the crying of newspapers on the Sabbath unlawful. A part of the same Section, that makes all "shows and plays, unless the same shall have been duly licensed by the proper authorities," applies to the lager bier theatricals. And that part that forbids all racing of any "animals, or running of any description" on the Sabbath, is applicable to the out-of-town horse-racing complained of. The Statute authorizes any Police Justice to proceed "summarily" in all cases of violation. The fine of $[illegible] goes to the Almshouse Department. And if the penalty is not immediately paid, with the costs, a commitment to the common prison for 30 days is the alternative.

Sec. 71 authorizes the seizure of all "wares, drugs, herbs, goods or chattels, exposed for sale, except meats, milk and fish, sold before 9 in the forenoon, and the goods so seized shall be sold on one days notice, and the proceeds paid to the overseer of the town."

Sec. 81 forbids any inn, tavern or hotel-keeper to sell or give away any intoxicating liquors or wines on Sunday "except to lodgers in such inns, or to persons actually traveling on that day, in cases allowed by law." All violations are misdemeanors, and the punishment is imprisonment in the jail, workhouse or penitentiary. The statute by a decision of the Supreme Court applies as well to persons licensed as to persons not licensed to sell liquors, and no person is allowed "publicly to keep or dispose of any intoxicating liquors upon the first day of the week, called Sunday."

The question whether or not lager-bier is intoxicating has not been legally adjudicated. One Jury has found that it is not, and another may find that it is.

Section 70, 11 R. S., 4th edition, page 82, which forbids all shooting, hunting, fishing and sporting and traveling, "unless in cases of charity or necessity," or to a place of worship, unless within twenty miles, servile work, &c., on the Lord's Day, has been obsolete law, for more than twenty years, though still on the Statute Book; but the other laws are in full vigor, and under them the Metropolitan Police now act.

A pamphlet on "The Sabbath as a Season appointed for recreation and enjoyment, by the Rev. J. L. Hayes, a Congregational clergyman of Brooklyn," has been extensively circulated by the "American Society for the Promotion of Civil and Religious Liberty." Mr. HAYES has gained great notoriety for his sermons; Sunday amusements and other things are usually regarded as sacred. His opinions are not new and they spring all from his advocacy from the fact that he is reputed to be a Congregational clergyman. We believe that he was refused admission into the body of the Congregationalists of New-York and Brooklyn some one year ago. His Congregationalism is, perhaps, of the Boise stamp. His envy is transferred to a Bishop of New-York. Had he sought it, he, perhaps, might have got both a Bishop and a Bishopric. Like a Hudson backer, and as the fact that the Sunday organ has published his envy, is deemed worthy of note, perhaps any of our Sunday papers would do him the little national service, if the publication be not too much to suit the taste of their patrons.

Lady Napier, with her children, is at the Tremont House, Boston. Lord Napier has taken rooms at the Revere House this season.

BY ANN. BLANVELT.

The twenty stars are proud and cold,
And walk far apart.
Nor know the joys they feel who clasp
Their kindred heart to heart.

O, bitter proud and cold are they!
They mightily hear our cries
Of pain second; but nevermore
Look down with dimmer eyes.

They see—ah! no; the poets err
Who told us that our race,
And give to Nature in our hearts
A confidential place.

She hath not ear to hear our sighs,
Nor eye to mark our tears,
Nor voice to make our hopes a faith,
Nor arm to slay our fears.

Created dust, she dust remains,
And this her kindest power
To bring a cherished friend to mind
When falls the lonely hour.

And should we give the dust our love,
And fly the friend in truth?
Alas! with those whose faith is thus
I walked in early youth.

But while I dozed beneath the stars,
And dreamed they shared my bliss,
A "merciless sorrow" took my hand,
And, staying, taught me this:

That human tears and smiles will soothe
When pain the light and dew;
That all the stars in heaven are false,
And man, our brother, true.

NEW BOOKS.

Douglas Jerrold's Wit.

DOUGLAS JERROLD did not first become known to the world as a wit, nor as a humorist, but as a reformer, and a philanthropist. The biographical sketch of him, published some years since by the author of "Orion," represented him as a very different sort of person from what his biographers and eulogists have presented him to the world since his death. But he appears to have acquired a celebrity as a wit hardly inferior to that of SIDNEY SMITH, who, like JERROLD, made his start in life as a political reformer and a liberal. But the wit of the two was of a very different character. The wit of SIDNEY SMITH is full of rollicking humor and good nature, while the wit of DOUGLAS JERROLD is so strongly tinted with ill-natured sarcasm, that it often creates more pain than pleasure. The best and sharpest of his sayings that have been preserved were elicited by the foibles or imperfections of his friends, and could hardly have excited any other than unpleasant feelings in those who gave birth to them. The thing which may be said of him most to his credit is, that his friends were among the best men of his day, and those who knew him most intimately entertained the highest opinion of his genius, and loved him most tenderly. It is from what they report of him, rather than from the published evidence of his genius, that the world ranks him as one of the wittiest men of an age which abounded in wit and humorous productions. Immediately after his death his friends broke out with one accord in laudations of him and his genial, kindly nature, and the magnates of the literary world of London united in an ovation to his memory, which was not intended merely as a mark of respect, but to raise a fund for the benefit of those whom his generous nature had left in want.

His son has now collected in a volume, which has been published by Messrs. TICKNOR & FIELDS, of Boston, "Specimens of his Father's Wit, together with Selections, chiefly from his Contributions to Journals, intended to Illustrate his Opinions." There is, therefore, a good deal in the volume which cannot be called wit, but which has a special value as affording indications of his character. The value of the collection would have been greatly increased if the compiler had indicated the sources whence the specimens were drawn, for the point and force of an epigram often depend upon the occasion on which it was uttered.

Most of the specimens we have seen before, but the first one is new:

"A gentleman waited upon JERROLD one morning to enlist his sympathies in behalf of a mutual friend who was in want of a round sum of money, but this mutual friend had already sent his hat about among his literary brethren on more than one occasion. Mr. ——'s hat was becoming an institution, and the friends were grieved at the indelicacy of the proceeding. On the occasion to which we now refer, the bearer of the hat was received by JERROLD with evident dissatisfaction.

'Well,' said JERROLD, 'how much does —— want this time?'

'Why, just a four and two noughts will, I think, put him straight,' the bearer of the hat replied.

JERROLD—'Well, put me down for one of the noughts.'"

There is certainly some wit in this, but considering the occasion which struck it out, there is a good deal more of ill-nature.

The third specimen may be a very sagacious remark, but it is not in much danger of being cribbed, we should say, by any future editor of Joe Miller:

"Sir, There is but one path to substantial greatness—the path of statesmanship. Yes, though you cut out in a thread-bare coat and a hole in either shoe, if you walk with a cautious eye to the skies, you'll one day find yourself in velvet and gold, with music in your name and money in your pocket."

But here is a really witty saying which Joe Miller will be certain to incorporate into his cyclopædia:

"The surest way to a woman's heart is to take the knocker."

And this:

"Character's like money, when you've a great deal you may risk some; for, if you lose it, folks still believe you've plenty to spare."

Another:

"With women as with warriors, there's no robbery—all's stratagem."

Here is a specimen which is doubly offensive for its ill nature and its ill-odor:

"A literary gentleman once said pretentiously to JERROLD, 'My dear JERROLD, you know, of course, what game is!' 'No,' JERROLD replied; 'but I can understand your knowledge, you've had so much thrown at you in your time.'"

Some of his biographers have stated that he prided himself on never descending to pun, but his son gives the following as a specimen of his wit:

"JERROLD went to a party at which a Mr. PEPPER had assembled all his friends. JERROLD said to his host, on entering the room, 'My dear Mr. PEPPER, how glad you must be to see all your friends mustered!'"

Here is a specimen which has the very highest quality of wit—profound truth:

"JERROLD was in France, and with a Frenchman, who was enthusiastic on the subject of the Anglo-French alliance. He said that he was proud to see the English and French such good friends at last. JERROLD—'Yes! the best thing I know between France and England—is the sea.'"

"Many a house in this town is a swan house, all white and fair outside; but only think of the black-legs that are working out of sight!"

Here is a specimen which might have appeared among BURTON'S Life Thoughts, without any suspicion of his parentage:

"PEPER—'What a common sight we not preach upon these little boxes! small sticking-places of earthly satisfaction, sanctuaries for self-complacency—in God's own house, the chosen chambers for man's self-glorification! What an instructive sermony might not the bare deal bench of the poor church-goer hold with the soft-cushioned seat of the miserable sinner who chariot it to prayers, and with their souls arrayed in sackcloth and ashes, vestured in silk and minever.'"

But, here again is a specimen of true wit:

"A man's in no danger so long as he talks his love; but to write it is to impale himself on his own pot-hooks."

Douglas Jerrold's Wit makes a very handsome volume, and a very pleasant one for desultory reading. Whoever reads it through will lay it down with the conviction that JERROLD was not only a wit but something infinitely better—a man who loved his own species and used the talent that God had given him to promote their happiness.

Following The Drum. In the stirring title of a very lively and pleasant volume of personal adventures, by Mrs. VIELE, published by RUDD & CARLETON. Mrs. VIELE is an accomplished lady well known in New-York society, who entered the army a few years ago by way, not of West Point, but of Grace Church, with the enthusiasm for the service which might have been expected in the daughter of a regiment. Her imagination was as full of glorious pictures of military life as those that inflamed the heart of young Norval; and, like the hero of the Grampian Hills, she longed to follow to the field some warlike lord. "My beau ideal hero," she says, "would have completely lost his identity without his sword and epaulets; and as for my beau-ideal heroine, the Maid of Saragossa was a poor, tame, spiritless creature compared to her." With aspirations like these, she of course felt as proud and happy as a princess royal, with the trousseau with which, as she informs us, she was endowed in Grace Church the day of her enlistment, which "consisted of a mortgage on a camp kettle, mess chest, bundle of canvas, and set of tent poles." It was a dash to her aspiration for military glory that her first experience of duty was at a recruiting station in the very quiet and prosy town of Burlington, in Vermont. After six months spent in this humdrum kind of military life, which was a kind of drum of a wholly different character from that which she longed to follow, orders came from Washington to join the first Regiment of United States Infantry, at Ringgold Barracks, Texas, on the lower Rio Grande. The journey was made by the way of Havana and New-Orleans, which affords our Bellona some favorable opportunities for giving lively sketches of those places. From New-Orleans they proceed on their journey by way of Galveston, and there, as at all other places where she stops, she finds abundant subjects for her pointed and picturesque pen. The journey thence to Ringgold Barracks, is exceedingly well described and nothing escapes the keen eye of our enthusiastic journalist, who has a special fondness for genre pictures, and revels in describing the whimsical specimens of humanity which she encounters. Soon after her arrival in the Barracks, she had opportunities for seeing something of the skirmishing warfare of camp life on the Western frontier, in some engagements with the wild men of the forest and prairie. Her descriptions of Texan life and manners, and of the splendors of tropical scenery, as of the rugged characters which give a romantic picturesqueness to the frontier, are full of most admirable touches which indicate ability of a very high order, and afford promise of something better hereafter. It is very rarely that we have had the pleasure of welcoming a more successful débutante in the walks of literature. Mrs. VIELE followed the drum but a short time, and we come to the "last tap" sooner than we desired. Her book is not a biography, nor a history, but only a portfolio of artistic sketches; but such as it is, it is what she intended to make it—lively, familiar, good-natured and readable.

The most remarkable narrative of slave-life which has yet appeared—more remarkable in every respect than the story of Uncle Tom, or any other fiction of the kind, is Father Henson's Story of His Own Life, which has just been published by JEWETT, of Boston, with an introduction by Mrs. STOWE, in which she says that HENSON "was born a slave, in a heathen land, and under a heathen master." But he was born in Maryland, and his master was a heathen only in the sense that all slave-owners are heathens. HENSON remained a slave until he was over thirty years old, when he made his escape from bondage, made his way to Canada, where he became a Methodist preacher, and founded the settlement of Dawn, which is composed chiefly of fugitive slaves. He has been to England, was well received by the most eminent men in the nation, and was offered by Lord GREY, when that nobleman was at the head of the Colonial Office, an office in India, to superintend the experiments in cotton-planting. The narrative is admirably well-written, wholly free from cant and exaggeration, and bears upon its face the appearance of perfect truthfulness. One of the most singular incidents narrated by Father Henson, is an account of his master having induced him to run off from Maryland to Kentucky with all his slaves, to save them from being sold by the Sheriff for debt.

The Life and Times of Hugh Miller, by THOMAS N. BROWN, of which Messrs. RUDD & CARLETON have published an "author's edition," is not so full and comprehensive a biography of the remarkable man who forms the subject of it as we should have expected from the "eminent Scotch divine," the author is represented to be. It is, however, a very readable volume, and the principal events of MILLER's life are narrated in a pleasant style. But the author has made an attempt, which will be likely to find a good many opponents and occasion some controversy, to prove that HUGH MILLER is better entitled to be regarded as the representative man of Scotland than either BURNS or SCOTT. But how would it sound to call Scotland, the land of MILLER, as it is often called "the land of BURNS and SCOTT?" In the sense in which the author of this history of HUGH MILLER calls him Scotland's representative man, he is much less entitled to the distinction than Sir ANDREW AGNEW. But Mr. BROWN thinks that "the nation whose religious struggles surpassed even the splendor of her conflicts for civil freedom, cannot call the author of the Holy Fair a type of the children of the covenant." Still, for a' that, and a' that, Scotchmen will still be proud to claim the author of "Scots wha hae," as their countryman, and adopt him as their representative man.

We have recently seen several inquiries in the papers as to the authorship of that often-quoted couplet—

"Think that day lost whose low descending sun Views from thy hand no noble action done."

And we find the information sought for in the new edition of Familiar Quotations, by JOHN BARTLETT, just published by him in Cambridge, Mass. The couplet, it seems, occurs in the collection of Albums in the British Museum, and was written by JACOB BOBART, of Oxford, who died about 1726. This collection of quotations is the best arranged and most valuable one of the kind that has ever been published; it is not, like the common books of quotations, intended to give information to the unlearned as to the meaning of the Latin and French phrases which are current in conversation and literature, but to give the exact readings of familiar proverbs and the names of their authors. There are few persons who could tell the origin of the popular superstition, or belief, that oysters are unwholesome food in any month without an R in it; this belief can hardly be regarded as a question, but it appears that the idea was first suggested in Butler's Dyet's Dry Dinner, 1599, where it is stated that, "It is uncomfortable and unwholesome in all months that have not an R in their name to eat an oyster." We gain a new idea of the all-pervading wisdom of SHAKESPEARE from the fact that of the 380 pages of quotations in the volume, which comprise nearly all his familiar use from the times of Moses down to the present, the quotations from Shakespeare make 66 pages. The quotations from the "Holy Scriptures" which are arranged by themselves and include also the Book of Common Prayer, make but 25 pages. The value of this useful little volume is greatly increased by an index by which any quotation desired may be found.

The oldest city in the United States, and almost the only one that can exhibit anything like a respectable ruin, is the drowsy little city of St. Augustine in East Florida. Very little is known about it except by those who have made its history a special subject of study, or the few invalids who resort to it from the North for the benefit of its delicious atmosphere, which, if all report be true, is the very best and most genial in the world. It is [illegible] within our own Union, so easily accessible, which abounds in every luxury that can be grateful to an enfeebled body, and where the cost of living is so reasonable, should be so little resorted to by invalids while there are so many who go to Europe to suffer and die in Italy and France. A very interesting history of St. Augustine and its antiquities, by GEO. R. FAIRBANKS, has been published by CHARLES B. NORTON. The author has included in his work some of the most interesting events connected with the early history of Florida, and devoted a considerable part of his volume to an account of the Huguenot Colony which settled there in the latter part of the sixteenth century.

The Cyclopædia of Modern Wit and Humor—edited by W. E. BURTON—forms two large and richly illustrated volumes, making together 1,124 pages, of which 608 pages are occupied with specimens from American authors. It furnishes the best idea of the peculiar characteristics of American humor that has yet been published, and will astonish many by the evidences which it gives of our national wealth in this kind of literature. The second volume is devoted to Irish, Scotch and English humor, the specimens of the latter being of course by far the most numerous and the most racy. The wood-cut illustrations are mostly original, and many of them are very excellent, and in addition to them there are twenty-four portraits of English and American authors, engraved on steel. Mr. BURTON has prefaced the work, for it is a work which must have cost no small amount of intellectual and intelligent labor, with a well-written essay on wit and humor, in which the question as to what constitutes the difference between them is left—where all other essayists who have attempted to explain it have left the question—unexplained. The volumes are most gracefully dedicated by the editor to his daughters, "whose keen and delicate perception of the witty and the humorous, materially assisted him in his researches, and whose exertions as copyists saved him many weary hours of labor." The "Cyclopædia" forms a capital collection for a country library, or for the cabin of a steamship, or for any other place where the solace of genial and innocent mental recreation may be needed.

The Course of True Love Never Did Run Smooth is the title of a small story, in verse, by THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, published by RUDD & CARLETON, in the dainty style in which they present their young poets to the public. It is an Arabian tale; the Caliph Haroun Al Raschid, who will be the idol of poets and romancers to the end of time, that he might enjoy the agreeable society of GLAFFER the Barmecide, determined to make that charming person his brother-in-law by uniting him in marriage to his sister, the Princess of Abassa; but the foolish Haroun also determined that though they were man and wife according to law, they should still remain strangers to each other, an absurd idea which the parties chiefly interested in the arrangement very wisely frustrated. But they were punished for it, and paid their lives as the price of their pleasure. The story is not very clearly told, the poetry is not so voluptuous as the subject demands, and the motive of the whole is not by any means elevated.

The sixth volume of Memoirs of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, published by LIPPINCOTT & Co., of Philadelphia, contains several papers of great interest, among which is "Some Account of the Society of Cincinnati," by ALEXANDER JOHNSTON, and a very interesting paper, by WILLIAM B. REED, on "The Acadian Exiles, or French Neutrals in Pennsylvania." The first volume published by the Society under a new system, by which any person who contributes twenty dollars will be entitled to all its future publications, was the fifth of the series, and includes a history of BRADDOCK'S Expedition.

California Life Illustrated, by WILLIAM TAYLOR, published by CARLTON & PORTER, is a plain and unambitious account of the Gold State as it appeared to the author from a rather different stand-point than that from which most adventurers in the diggings viewed it. He landed in San Francisco in 1849, and, instead of prospecting for gold, commenced the more profitable course, morally speaking, of preaching to the reckless people whom he found there. Mr. TAYLOR gives a lively and hearty account of his missionary labors, and affords a better opportunity for judging of the state of society and manners than we have found in any other volume on California. His book is illustrated with a great number of not very well drawn nor very well engraved views.

Pearls of Thought, is the very pretty and appropriate title of a small volume of selections from the best authors, published by Messrs. STANFORD & DELISSER. The pearls have been strung together by "F. S." the initials of the compiler of that very popular and excellent volume the Salad for the Solitary. It may seem a very easy matter to make a selection of choice bits from the treasures of literature, like the Pearls of Thought; but let any one make the attempt and he will find that it can only be done by extensive reading of good authors, and not even then, without the intuitive tact which enables the picker-up of pearls to select the best things from the best sources, which when segregated from their native mines, will appear like perfect productions by themselves. The art of scissoring, of clipping, selecting and arranging the pearls of literature, is an art which few have understood. The Pearls of Thought, in the small volume before us, evince not only extensive reading, but a pure and exquisite taste in their selection.

MAGAZINES FOR JULY.

The Magazines furnish the best, or at least the most acceptable reading for hot weather; they can be conveniently carried in the cost pocket or travelling-bag, and are equally adapted to railroad cars, steamboats, the quiet of a cottage by the seaside, or the shady piazza of a watering-place hotel. And the Editors of these popular works appear to have taken special pains to adapt them to the relaxing influences of the season.

The Atlantic, now in its ninth month, is more magazinish than any of its predecessors, and better suited to the popular taste. With the exception of the first article, which is the conclusion of a very excellent, but, like many other excellent things, rather heavy series of papers on the "Catacombs of Rome," the magazine may be read right through, without stopping to think. And this is one great point gained in magazine manufacture—to amuse the reader without taxing his brain too heavily. We cannot notice each article, but we may mention those that are specially good in their way, and their way is a very good way. "Songs of the Sea" is a pleasant piece of marine gossip, which none but a sailor could have written. The "Kinloch Estate" is the commencement of a capital story. "The Gaucho" has the charm of style connected with thorough knowledge of a capital subject. "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" is as good as ever, which is high praise enough. "The American Tract Society" is a delicious piece of writing; let the readers of it differ as they may as to the argument, no one can fail to relish the piquancy and literary grace of the writing. The Literary Notices of the Atlantic are good, but too few and slight for a monthly of its literary pretensions.

"HARPER'S" maintains its well-established character in all respects, and the "Virginians," we are very glad to see, is improving. The July installment has more of the Thackeray humor than all the others put together. The original stories in Harper for the past month or two have been exceedingly good.

The Knickerbocker is looking up again among the monthlies. The July number comes out with a new co-editor, Dr. NOYES, author of Romanza, and we notice the return to its pages of J. G. SAXE, who has a characteristic poem, and STODDARD and HOLMES, too, are among the contributors. We believe, it has fairly set out with a new and able editor, Mr. B. L. GOODWIN, a fine-spirited portrait of the editress of the "Knickerbocker Table," grates the July number.

THE CASE OF CUNNINGHAM AGAIN.

The Facts in it, as Established by the Evidence on Both Sides, Reviewed.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The letter signed "Justice," published in your paper to-day, gives a very fair statement of the grounds on which four of the Jurymen, in the case of CUNNINGHAM, indicted for the murder of McLAUGHLIN dissented from the opinion of the remaining eight, who were in favor of finding a verdict, involving more or less of punishment. The letter of "Justice" is substantially the legal argument and view of facts advanced by Judge WHITING on behalf of the prisoner; and that the learned Judge should have made a great impression upon the mind and memory of your correspondent is not to be wondered at by any one who heard the earnestness, cogency, and rhetorical skill with which he persisted in bringing his client before the Jury as an injured innocent, more deserving a service of plate than State Prison.

Now as I was present during the entire trial, and formed an opinion—a very strong one—on the other side, perhaps you will allow me to state the views of the matter, as eloquently set forth by the Assistant District Attorney on behalf of the prosecution,—views with which I entirely agreed, and conditions of fact which we find thoroughly substantiated in the midst of conflicting testimony.

It is established, then, by all the evidence in the case, that the quarrel with McLOUGHLIN on that evening, was commenced by CUNNINGHAM. PAYNE and McLAUGHLIN were arguing together about MOSSBERT, when CUNNINGHAM came up to where they stood and began the dispute—as Mr. SEDGWICK forcibly observed—by a "direct reflection" on Mc. LAUGHLIN's courage, prisoner telling deceased to reserve his conversation till MOSSBERT was present, and thereby clearly insinuating, that under those circumstances the prisoner would be "afraid to speak his mind." Two witnesses further testified, that when CUNNINGHAM advanced on this occasion, he seized hold of McLAUGHLIN's coat-collar; the other witnesses did not see the act, but this was no contradiction to the affirmative evidence of Messrs. YOUNG and ALLEN, who both swore positively that they saw it, and could not be mistaken.

It is established, secondly, that CUNNINGHAM, having thus originated the brawl, had at least one opportunity to withdraw from it unmolested, to wit, while PAYNE had McLAUGHLIN clenched on the floor, TUNBRIDGE and all others present taking sides with PAYNE, who was the friend of CUNNINGHAM. Indeed, it is clear from the evidence that McLAUGHLIN had but one friend in the room; while the 15 or 20 "fancy" gentlemen present, invariably took sides with CUNNINGHAM during all stages of the three hours' wrangle. Their appearance and evidence on the witness stand abundantly satisfied me of the side on which their feelings were enlisted. "McLAUGHLIN is dead," said Mr. SEDGWICK, "and the memory of these witnesses is just such as we might expect, where the mere name of a dead enemy is found in conflict with the interests of a living friend." They remembered every epithet of abuse McLAUGHLIN had applied to CUNNINGHAM; they all swore there was "jawing backwards and forwards for some hours;" and yet not one solitary man could remember a solitary syllable uttered by the prisoner, except those words of supposed "legal warning," which, to my mind, gave the highest evidence of a cunning and cowardly design to get on the windward side of the law, and then do a deliberate and cruel murder.

All the witnesses testified that McLAUGHLIN did no more on any occasion that night than seize the prisoner by the coat-collar, and this action amongst men of that class, we think, is nothing either unusual or degrading. Twice on that night he had seized him and let go his hold without striking or attempting to strike a blow. On the third seizure, and this is established by all the evidence, McLAUGHLIN caught hold of the prisoner's coat-collar with his left hand, drew him half way forward over the counter, and held him in that position from four to six minutes, during all which time the "jawing backwards and forwards" went on, but no single act of violence or even menace of personal injury proceeded from the deceased to CUNNINGHAM. Four witnesses testify that during all this period (from four to six minutes) they distinctly saw the prisoner's right hand resting, open and palm downward on the counter—the most natural position for a man holding another across the counter with his left hand. Three witnesses standing in favorable positions to observe, and friendly to CUNNINGHAM, state that they did not see McLAUGHLIN's right hand at all—did not notice it, at least, although they saw the whole transaction; and only one witness, who had all the signs of weak intellect, and acted as doorkeeper and bottle-washer at the ball-room where the homicide occurred, gave evidence that he saw McLAUGHLIN's right hand clenched and drawn back to its full length behind him, in an attitude so peculiar that (if true) it could not have escaped the notice of any one present possessing common eyesight and a position from which the parties could be seen.

CUNNINGHAM, then, it is shown by all the witnesses, commenced the difficulty with words peculiarly hurtful to the "honor" of McLAUGHLIN as a fighting man; on the evidence of two uncontradicted witnesses he even began by laying hold of the unarmed man whom he afterwards shot. And here let me say, without any love for HARVEY YOUNG or others of his tribe, that I believe YOUNG's character just as good—and no better—than that of the great majority of the witnesses in this case. Against ALLEN, the keeper of the place, no imputation was advanced; and he and YOUNG both testified to the seizure of deceased's coat-collar by the prisoner.

If CUNNINGHAM had been afraid of McLAUGHLIN, why did he accept McLAUGHLIN's challenge to meet him in the middle of the floor, and move out from behind the bar, for that purpose? If he so feared the deceased, why did he not quit the scene of irritation which he had himself provoked, when PAYNE had McLAUGHLIN on the floor?

On these facts, and applying the principles of law contended for by Mr. SEDGWICK in a speech of singular ability and force, and taking the law for this particular case as laid down in the Recorder's charge, I could form no other opinion, taking the most lenient view of the facts, than that the prisoner had been guilty of manslaughter in the third degree; and according to the strictest letter of the law—overruled by recent usages here, on the wisdom of which I have no opinion to offer—that he was guilty of deliberate murder, rather aggravated on his part by the tricky and small precautions he took to secure impunity for an act which was one (as it seemed to me) of predetermined malice.

Let me be understood as intending to cast no reflection on the four gentlemen who considered the case one of justifiable homicide. I know them to be upright, conscientious and law-abiding citizens; and I admit that the conflict of evidence on minor points in the case, and the great moral weight which Judge WHITING throws on the side of whatever cause he is engaged in,—these causes I can understand as naturally producing such a "reasonable doubt" in the minds of the four gentlemen that they could not, consistently with their oaths, act otherwise than they did. I differ from them with the utmost deference, and protest against any censure for the exercise, on their part, of the best judgment and most patient investigation they could give.

ORDER.

The Cunningham Case.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

DEAR SIR: In your issue of to-day, is contained two letters over the respective signatures of "Wayne" and "Justice," relative to the above case, in which your correspondents handle you "without gloves," for the free expression of your views upon the verdict of the four jurors who insisted that no offence had been committed by CUNNINGHAM which rendered him amenable to the law; but had merely acted to the deceased (Paudeen) in a manner which was perfectly justifiable. At least their verdict implied as much.

Now, Sir, I cannot conceive how "Justice" could expect, especially with such feeble views of the subject-matter as are set forth in his letter, to thrust into the mind of any intelligent person, as a fact, that the minority of that Jury were right, and the majority wrong, as he alleges they were. His whole argument, in fact, as is invariably the case, is killed by the very quotation he makes from the Statute for its support.

If "Justice" will review that section of the Statute defining "Justifiable Homicide," and which he quotes in his letter for the benefit of the four dissentient jurors, he will, I am assured, find nothing therein contained which will, under any construction, adapt itself favorably to the accused; but if, on the other hand, he will look into and examine the statutory definition of manslaughter and its respective degrees, he will readily discover that there are two degrees of manslaughter upon which a conviction could have been had, viz: the third and the fourth, either of which would apply.

"Justice" argues that if the accused had committed any offence, it must have been either "murder" or "justifiable homicide." This he ought to know is not the case; but he has probably been misled by the remark to the Jury of the defendant's counsel that they must either convict of murder or acquit his client. "Justice," however, should bear in mind that it was a suggestion made to the Jury in the capacity of "counsel," and not otherwise.

There are four degrees of manslaughter, of either of which a person inflicted for the death of another may be convicted. Now, in order to [illegible] the prisoner in the case in question, it must be seen that he had in his own actual knowledge, or from what he had been told by others, sufficient ground to apprehend a great or imminent danger to himself, or to do some great personal injury, and that he shall be instructed danger, or such danger being accomplished."

There seems, however, a great lack of testimony in support of my such theory. The gist of the whole matter, judging from the testimony, seems to be that the accused and the deceased, whilst visiting one of the low dance-houses so prevalent in this City, got into an altercation in respect to the character of one MOSSBERT—a man not wholly unknown to the authorities, and whose character would be likely to be analyzed in such a house. The accused defended MOSSBERT, in his absence, for which interference the deceased threatened to "slap his face," and, as is alleged, chased him behind the bar for that purpose, and from which place the pistol shot was fired which ended in Paudeen's death.

The fair and just inference, therefore, is, that had Paudeen succeeded in getting CUNNINGHAM into his power, he would only have carried out his threat, and in the common parlance of the circle in which the parties moved, have "licked" him. This, in law, would have been no felony, nor "imminent danger," &c. And consequently, there was no need for the use of an instrument of the character of the one used.

I feel it right to say, Sir, that I, in common with the mass of this community, feel no grief for the loss of such a man as Paudeen, but rather rejoice at his death, regarding it as a relief to society. A man who has "revelled" in vice from his cradle to the grave, could expect little else than a violent end. The moral effect, however, is not the legal effect.

The legal effect would be, if the verdict of the Jury, as given by the four jurors whom "Justice" seeks to uphold, had been unanimous, that for such assault committed (although against the character) the aggressor's life must be the penalty for the offence, because a Jury indorses it. This City is large, and yet growing, from the constant incoming of foreigners; do not let us, then, establish this pernicious doctrine, as a guide-post either to the native, the adopted citizen, or the stranger, that if he is "slapped in the face," or "pulled over a counter," the law of the State of New-York will justify him in taking the life of his assailant.

Gen. Lane's Trial for Murder.

FOURTH DAY.

From Our Own Reporter.

LAWRENCE, Thursday morning, June 17, 1855.

A. D. Searl, sworn—I have filed a diagram with the Court this morning; it is one I made of the various localities, the ground and objects described about the premises of J. H. Lane and Gaius Jenkins; the distances are correctly taken with instruments, and noted on the diagram.

The diagram was here produced to the Court.

G. W. Smith, sworn—I think it was on the Tuesday afternoon before Col. Jenkins was killed—but it might have been a few days earlier—I was in company with Gen. Lane and Mr. Stephens, the lawyer; it was near the head of the stairs leading to Lane's office, in Lawrence; I cannot state what we were talking about first; I was waiting for Mr. Christian to come; did not hear what Lane and Stephens were talking about; the first thing that attracted my attention upon the subject was, Lane said Jenkins had come to his well with an axe to break off the lock; that he was absent at the time Jenkins came there; he said Jenkins dare not come there when he was at home; that Mrs. Lane had taken the axe from him and run him out of the yard; he said if he came into the yard when he was there, he would kill him; think he made use of that expression three or four times; he then remarked that Jenkins was insane upon the subject of the claim; up to this time neither Stephens nor myself had spoken; I then spoke and said I thought he (Lane) was the most insane of the two; that no sane man would talk of shooting another for coming to his well for water; I had made these remarks rather emphatically, he having repeated his threats towards Jenkins so often that I took the liberty to reprimand him; I don't know that Stephens spoke; the only answer Lane made was, that if Jenkins ever came into that yard when he was there, he would shoot (or kill) him; that is all I recollect that was said at the time on the subject; I now remember that he further said, if he had been at home when he (Jenkins) came with the axe to knock the lock off, he would have killed him then; he said his family sent for him at the time, but when he got over there Jenkins had gone; don't think I ever heard Lane threaten Jenkins before.

Cross-examined—I never heard Jenkins intimate that he would kill or injure Lane; but have heard him say that Lane threatened to kill him; but he said he didn't fear Lane, as he believed he was a coward; I have been very intimate with Jenkins.

Question—Have you stated to any body, since the death of Gaius Jenkins, that Jim Lane was a d—— d scoundrel, and any one that defended him was one also?

Answer—I have stated it in those words, but may have said worse; I have said that I have had thirty years' experience in public life, and that Lane was the most corrupt man that I had ever known in all my experience, and that he ought to have been shot on the spot; in some conversations I have got rather warm, when men have attempted to justify him, and have wound up in this way, that whoever defended Lane was a d—— d scoundrel; I have only referred, in all I have said about Lane, to the murder, and have none but friendly feelings toward him in other respects; General Lane did not state, as I recollect, that Jenkins had insulted his wife at the time referred to; the Mr. Stephens referred to was Mr. Jenkins' lawyer in the claim case; I did not hear Lane tell Stephens, as the attorney of Jenkins, that he wanted him (Stephens) to tell Jenkins that the only way they could get along peaceably was for him (Jenkins) to stay on his premises, and permit Lane to stay on his, and that he wanted no difficulty with him; but this question brings to mind that Lane did say that as soon as Jenkins' crops were ready to harvest, he (Lane) intended to take two-thirds of them, and leave him one-third; I replied that I thought he would have a good time of it; this conversation was as much with me as with Stephens, but I think Stephens did not speak.

Q.—Have you not stated publicly in the town of Lawrence, in presence of many persons, that if your evidence would convict Gen. Lane of killing Gaius Jenkins, that you would walk fifty miles to give it in, or words to that effect?

A.—I am very certain I never did; I did not say I would walk fifty miles to testify; I am opposed to capital punishment, and that was my reason for saying he ought to have been shot at the time; besides, I did not suppose he would get venire in the courts—I knew others had not, and that was another reason for my saying he ought to have been shot; have also said the man who shot at Lane, behaved badly, and ought to be punished for not shooting better.

Q.—Have you not stated in the town of Lawrence that the two men who shot at Lane, at the time he killed Jenkins, ought to be shot, or killed, for not shooting better?

A.—I don't recollect the words I used—but did say, after they were arrested, that they ought to be convicted for not shooting better, and that this was the only offence in my opinion they were guilty of.

Q.—Have you not stated, since the death of Jenkins, in the town of Lawrence, that you would like to be the executioner of Lane, and put the rope around his neck.

A.—No, Sir, nothing of the kind, nor anything like it; I came from Pennsylvania to Kansas; I believe I was elected the Governor of Kansas on the 4th of January last.

Direct resumed—Mr. Thomas Stephens I have referred to, I have been informed has gone to Ohio.

Duncan C. Allison, sworn—I am a clerk in Mr. Hornsby's store; Gen. Lane purchased some shot a few days before the death of Mr. Jenkins, at the store; he got about half a pound; he said he wanted a few to load his gun; he asked me if we had any powder, I told him we had none; he said something about getting it somewhere else; he went out then; Gen. Lane did not pay for the shot.

[Witness here presented a specimen of the shot he sold Gen. Lane—96 in number.]

Cross-examined—I brought over 96 shot; I suppose that would be an ordinary load; I am acquainted with loading guns; Gen. Lane did not examine the shot; think he must have called for small shot, as I put up small ones; we had two smaller sizes; I saw Mr. Jenkins in the forenoon of the day of the homicide at the store; I am not well enough acquainted with him to say whether he had been drinking; he appeared more in earnest than usual when talking; I saw him at the bar of the saloon twice that forenoon, but did not see him drink; heard him talking with Mr. Hornsby about Lane's driving his hired man away from the well, and that Lane had threatened him; he said he was going to get water, that he had been drinking slough water long enough; he said Lane had threatened to shoot him, but that he did not fear him, for he was a coward and had been proven such; said he should get water cost what it would; this was 9 or 10 o'clock in the forenoon of the day he was shot; he appeared more in earnest than usual.

Adjourned to 3 o'clock.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Charles Duncan, sworn—About seven or eight days before the death of Gaius Jenkins, General Lane came into our store and bought some powder; I was at the store of Hornsby when he came and inquired for powder and shot; they told him they only had shot; he then asked me if we had powder at our store; I replied, we had; he then went over with me and got some powder; he got a very small quantity, and did not pay for it; there was no time we made no charge for it; he said he wanted but very little, and did not say what he wanted of it; I should suppose there was enough for four or five charges; think it was Thursday evening before the occurrence.

E. J. Eastman, sworn—I was present when General Lane took away a gun from Thomas Bushnell that he had borrowed; he did not say what he was going to do with it; it was in the night time; I was in bed and heard him ask for it, and understood he took it away.

Samuel F. Tappan, sworn—About a week before Mr. Jenkins was shot, I met General Lane at the Eldridge Hotel, going towards home; he asked if I had any Sharpe's rifle caps; he had a Sharpe's rifle with him, in the hand at the time; I said I had none; he asked where he could get them; I said I thought he could at Mr. Kimball's; that is all I know about it; he said he was taking the rifle over home; said nothing of any difficulty with any one; think it was the day, or about the time, Mrs. McDaniel was here from Fort Scott, for arms.

Miss Rose Jenkins, sworn—I knew Gaius Jenkins when he was living; I am acquainted with the house and premises called the Chapman Place, that is on the quarter-section occupied by Mr. Jenkins' family; and Mr. Jenkins has been using water from the well on that place since the Chapmans left, about three years; I have seen Mr. Jenkins [illegible]

Court adjourned to 8 o'clock, when the Court will hear Prince Hughes of Ia (the same Prince whom General Lane threatened).

Adjourned to 8 o'clock A. M. to-morrow.

The outcome for the prosecution will show to-morrow morning, and probably that of the defense will consume the balance of the week.

General LANE managed to get the [illegible] of the Court a few moments just before adjournment, when he addressed it with unusual pathos and energy, asking at their hands for a speedy conclusion of the trial, and shrewdly pleading for "mercy and justice" at their hands. If ever an earnest appeal to the profound intuition of such a prosecution.

BARNOLPH.

The Dudley Observatory Controversy—Letter from Dr. Gould.

To the Editor of the Evening Post:

DEAR SIR: My attention has been called to two articles published in your paper within a few days, as reflecting upon both my personal and my scientific character.

The student of science and investigator of nature has, in our present organization of society, his compensation, outside of his own consciousness, in his reputation. And although those who pursue science for her own sake early learn to disregard alike that immediate posterity and that temporary neglect which spring from ignorance, yet there remains to us the scientific attainment of persons, and to prize only the verdict of competent or partisan judges of these subjects; still, like other men, they cannot willingly allow imputations upon their good name, character,—that honor of their family which is their heritage.

Circumstances, which I deeply regret, have seemed to have been inevitable results of the only course compatible with my ideas of duty, have led to unpleasant relations between certain members of the Board of Trustees of the Dudley Observatory and myself. These circumstances, important in their results, are under investigation by my colleagues of the Scientific Council of the Observatory, Professors Henry, A. D. Bache and Benjamin Peirce. These gentlemen form the tribunal to which my actions have appealed, and in their hands I willingly leave the determination of the matters referred to them. Until their decision shall have been given, it would be eminently inappropriate in me to appeal to any other tribunal, and to the judgment of each man I shall always be proud to defer.

Instead of replying to your remarks, therefore, I will only remind you that they were based upon ex parte views; that they contain statements which I pronounce unfounded in fact—some of them, indeed, to an extent which would [illegible] [illegible] care at state less vital; and that their only [illegible] seems to be to forestall public sentiment upon matters now under investigation by an authority whose competence, in every respect, is unquestionable, and whose award cannot fail to become publicly known.

Should occasion ever demand, and proper [illegible] I think that entire publicity, regarding the origin and progress of the present difficulty, [illegible] desirable, and I am well aware that it would [illegible] be agreeable to my friends. The only [illegible] would be the unavoidable and painful [illegible] the unengaging field of controversy. Time for [illegible] has been as "quarrel," as your article indicates, [illegible] much as this word implies the participation of two RICE—Sales 225 tcs. at $3@$3 62½, cash, ⅌ 100 lbs.

SPICES—Sales 1,000 mats Cassia at 25c., with small lots of other kinds at previous prices.

SUGARS—The market is not so brisk; prices, however, are firm. Sales 654 hhds., chiefly Cuba, at from 5¾c.@7c. ⅌ ℔.

TALLOW—Large sales have been reported since our last at 9c.@9¼c., with some small lots at 9¼c., cash, ⅌ ℔.

TEAS—Blacks are salable and very firm. Green attract less attention at former quotations.

TOBACCO—Is more sought after at steady rates. Sales, since Tuesday last, 114 hhds. Kentucky at 8¼c.@14c.; 304 cases Seed Leaf at 6½c.@14c.; 438 bales Havana at 32c.@50c., and 55 bales Yara on private terms. At the Richmond Tobacco Exchange, last week, 1,663 hhds. Tobacco were sold, of which 630 were sold at auction, viz.: $4@$7, and under $4, 160 hhds.; $7@$10, 163 hhds.; $10@$13, 211 hhds.; $13@$16, 63 hhds.; $16@$20, 8 hhds.; $20@$25, 2 hhds.; over $25, 5 hhds. Nearly 44 ⅌ cent. sold for $10 and upwards—a much larger proportion than for either of the two preceding weeks. In Louisville, during the week ending June 22, 669 hhds. were sold, closing with merchantable lugs at $4 50@$5 25; common to medium leaf, $5 25@$7, and good to fine leaf, $7@$10.

WHISKY—Sales have been reported of 230 bbls. at 22½c.@23c. for Ohio and Prison; and equal to 22c. for Drudge, cash, ⅌ gallon.

FREIGHTS—For Liverpool, the reported engagements were confined to a little Cotton, at 7-32d. ⅌ ℔.; Flour at 1s. 6d.; 12,000 bushels Grain, at 4½d.@5d., in bulk and ships' bags, and a lot of Tallow, at 10s. For London, Flour, 1s. 9d.@2s., and 120 tons Copper Ore, at 11s. For Glasgow, some Shoulders, at 22s. For Bremen, 50 hhds. Tobacco, at 22s. 6d., and 700 bales, at 75c. For Rotterdam, Spirits Turpentine, at 2½c. ⅌ gallon.

Spirit of the Trade Circulars

WM. C. CUTTING'S FLOUR AND GRAIN PRICE CURRENT.

NEW-YORK, Saturday, June 26, 1858.

FLOUR, &c.—The Flour market for the week has been marked by no great changes. The speculative movement, which was confined mainly to State brands, has nearly subsided, and the market closes nearly at ...lower. Southern Flour is without change. The demand is fair, with moderate arrivals. Rye Flour is selling more freely, and is a little firmer. Corn Meal is scarce, and in very good demand, prices a shade better.

GRAIN—The Wheat Market throughout the entire week has ruled firm, particularly for sound Western. A very large proportion—fully three-quarters of the Chicago Spring, and nearly the same of the Milwaukee Club—offered since the opening of navigation, has been soft, foul, or otherwise out of order; this has been particularly the case for the last ten days. The fault in cleaning is principally with the farmers, and the loss properly belongs to them. Considering the condition, it is remarkable that prices have been so well sustained. Prime Milwaukee Club and Chicago Spring are scarce, and wanted at extreme outside quotations, and even higher rates might be realized, if the majority of the wheat coming forward was in perfect order; as it is, the low price of poor wheat has a depressing influence upon the better qualities. We hope very soon to see an improvement in these offerings, under the new system of inspection now in operation at Chicago. Rye is in good request, and prices a shade better. Corn is firmer; the supply is light and the demand fair. Oats are in limited request, and steady.

FREIGHTS are rather easier. The rates to Liverpool are—Per Grain, 4d.@4½d. in bulk, and 4¼d.@5d. in ship's bags; Flour, 1s 6d.

The Canadian tax on taverns, according to the Inspector-General's last estimates, will realize £10,000 next year; excise and additional duty on whisky adding £12,000 to the account.

SCHOOLEY'S PATENT PRESERVATORY.—Patented June 16, 1857. The attention of the citizens of New-York and vicinity is called to this new method of preserving meat, fruit and all articles of food in all their original purity and freshness for weeks and months.

Dealers in foreign and domestic fruit, meat, vegetables, game, fish, oysters, poultry, butter, eggs and milk; farmers, dairymen, hotel and restaurant keepers, and private houses, lard-oil and candle-makers, butchers, packers and pie-makers, will find this Preservatory specially adapted to their wants. A cold and perfectly dry and pure air is produced by this method. For rights, plans and information, apply to A. L. ALBERGEN, Buffalo, N. Y.; or A. O. GETTY, No. 175 West-st., New-York; or A. W. BEARDSLY, 109 Adelphi-st., Brooklyn.

N. B.—The public are cautioned against using or purchasing any permanent structure using a circulating current of air through the ice, and through the chamber to be cooled, as the same is an infringement of SCHOOLEY'S Patent, and will be assailed as such.

GENERAL COURIERS' CLUB, LONDON.—This Society has been established for several years; is formed from the most experienced and trustworthy couriers in Europe. Families desirous of traveling to that part of the world, unacquainted with the languages and customs of the continent, can be furnished with reliable couriers or interpreters on the usual terms, or any information gratis, by applying at the office of the Association, No. 12 Bury-st., St. James, London. Information can also be obtained from PHILIP SCHAFFNER, No. 56 Murray-st., New-York.

RELIGIOUS NOTICES.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH, CORNER OF Spring and Christie sts. The Rev. Mr. FERRIER will preach in this church on SUNDAY (27th) MORNING, in behalf of a mission among the Germans in Wisconsin. This clergyman was formerly a Roman Catholic priest. The public are invited to attend. Seats free. Service at 10½.

JOHN-STREET FIRST M. E. CHURCH.—Preaching TO-MORROW MORNING and EVENING, by the Pastor, the Rev. CHARLES E. HARRIS. Morning subject—Religious Fanaticism. Services to commence at 10½ and 7½ o'clock. The public generally are invited to attend. Seats free.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.
A CARD.

The Mozart engagement for this afternoon closes the Summer Season undertaken by the Associate Artists.

The members of the Company, several of whom are compelled by their engagements to leave for Europe early in the ensuing month, take the opportunity of returning their grateful thanks to a kind and generous public for their liberal support during this short season, enabling them, it is true, to fulfill their engagements with their employer; but the weather, the heat and various other causes have prevented their obtaining a full compensation for their personal services. The Associate Artists have, therefore, determined to make individual appeals to the public, in the form of BENEFITS, during the next week, being most positively the LAST APPEARANCES of Mme. MARIETTA GAZZANIGA in opera in America. The first Benefit, which will take place on MONDAY, June 28,

NEWS OF THE DAY.

By the arrival at this port of the schooner Sciota, from Carthagena, we have received later intelligence from Bogota than that brought by the last mail steamer. We learn that the New-Granadian House of Representatives has accepted, without alteration, the Cass-Herran Treaty, though the Senate had not yet receded from its amendments. It was expected, however, that, through the influence of President Ospina, the two Houses would, on joint ballot, pass the treaty without any material modifications.

Ten days later advices have been received from Buenos Ayres, by the arrival of the bark Doon at this port. The quarrel with Urquiza remains as at last advices, no further correspondence having taken place between the Governments, though the papers were discussing the matter at great length. A terrible shipwreck occurred in the Rio de la Plata on the 9th of May. A schooner ran upon a sunken wreck on Little Bank while on her passage from Montevideo to Buenos Ayres, and twelve of the passengers were lost. Business continues very dull.

The bark Princeton arrived yesterday, with later news from British Guiana. The Colonial Legislature had made an increase in the taxes—sufficient, it was thought, to meet the deficiency in the revenue. The Legislature had also passed resolutions asking for Coopys as agricultural laborers. Two vessels had arrived with Africans and Coolies.

A terrible accident occurred at a Masonic celebration in Wellsville, in this State, on Thursday, by the giving way of a portion of the flooring of a large hall, in which about seven hundred persons had collected to partake of a dinner. No person was killed, but forty or fifty were maimed, some of them very badly.

It is alleged that the recent explosion on board the steamer Pennsylvania, by which so many lives were lost, was caused by the culpable negligence of the engineer.

Three murderers were executed yesterday. One was James McGee, alias McKee, at Boston, for the murder of Galen Walker, Deputy Warden of the Massachusetts State Prison, about eighteen months ago, and the other two were Jean Baptiste Duponges and Marie Anne Belisle, at Montreal, for the murder of Catherine Provost, at St. Jerome last Winter.

The trial of George W. Hardy, for murder, in killing Charles H. C. Stone, in March last, for the seduction of his daughter, was commenced and ended on Friday last in New-Orleans, where the killing occurred. The result was an unqualified verdict of "Not guilty," which was received with the loudest demonstrations of approval, which the Court found it impossible to restrain. It is something noteworthy that a trial of so much importance, and in which so much interest was felt, should only occupy one day.

A dispatch from New-Haven states that the New-York yachts engaged in the race around Long Island were spoken abreast of that city yesterday at 1 o'clock, at which time the Rebecca was ahead.

Mr. G. G. H. Waters, Treasurer for the French Theatrical Company, playing at Wallack's Theatre, was assaulted at 1 o'clock yesterday morning in Bleecker-street, by two highwaymen while on his way home. Being an athletic man he soon knocked one down. Taking from his side coat pocket a silver spectacle case, he threatened to stab the other if he dared to advance upon him. The gleam of the silver in the moonlight had the glitter of steel to the two knights of the road, and they hastily decamped. Mr. Waters had a considerable sum of money with him.

The daily business men's prayer-meetings in No. 175 Broadway, were, yesterday, terminated with appropriate exercises, projected repairs in the edifice rendering the continuance of these reunions impossible. Among the speakers were Dr. Hague, the Rev. Dr. Spring, the Rev. Dr. Bethune, Mr. Wetmore, and Sergeant Jones.

The Psi Upsilon Fraternity dined together at the Lafarge House last night. The Convention adjourned yesterday to meet in this City again next year.

In the Court of General Sessions, yesterday, William H. Hilton, a colored man, was tried before the Recorder, for the murder of Mary Stevens, a woman with whom he cohabited. The defence was that she shot herself, out of jealousy, and the testimony led directly to that conclusion. The Jury immediately acquitted the accused, without leaving their seats. In another Court, Judge Russell tried Henry Blumenthal, for burglary. He broke into the store of Louis Cameo, No. 47 Canal-street, on April 13, and stole boots and shoes worth $170. As late as October last he left the State Prison, where he had served out a term of two years and nine months. He was convicted yesterday, and sentenced to ten years in the State Prison. Alexander Hoag was tried for keeping a notoriously disorderly house, at No. 107 Grand-street, corner of Mercer. He was convicted, and will be sentenced to-day. He is a very old offender.

Judge Russell's indictment will come before the Recorder, in the Court of General Sessions, to-day. Charles O'Conor and A. Oakey Hall will argue the case for the Judge. There will be some interesting developments.

Yesterday, 1,300 bales Cotton were sold at unchanged prices. Flour was less sought after, though buyers had any existing advantage. Wheat and Corn were in request. Desirable lots, which were scarce, commanded an advance on previous rates. Provisions were less inquired for. Pork and Lard tended downward. Beef was firm. Java Coffee was more active. Sugars and Rice were in fair demand. Spirits Turpentine declined to 48c., cash, 49 gallon, here. Tobacco was in better request. Freights were quiet.

The Cass-Herran Treaty to be Ratified.—By an arrival from New-Granada, with later dates than any yet received from Bogota, we learn that there is a strong probability that the Cass-Herran Treaty will be ratified at last. The New-Granadian House of Representatives had accepted the Convention in its original shape, and though the Senate had not receded from its amendments, it was expected that upon a joint ballot the liberal party would triumph. Of all men in New-Granada, the enlightened President of that Republic has done most to secure this end. He has recognized, from the first, the justice of the provisions stipulated in the Cass-Herran Treaty. Those provisions are simply that the citizens of the United States, who suffered from the Panama massacre in 1856, shall be indemnified, and that New-Granada, for the future, shall maintain the peace on the Isthmus. We trust that the news which we publish, this morning, will be fully confirmed by the next regular mail, now about due, and that we shall soon be enabled to announce the settlement of our long-pending dispute with the Republic of New-Granada.

The War Feeling in Europe.

The whole of Europe, and we might add, the whole of America, is on the tiptoe of expectation to know what Louis Napoleon means by his armaments. Half a million of soldiers, seventy thousand sailors, and a steam fleet as large as England's, were never got ready for mere show. That somebody is to undergo a thrashing seems pretty certain, and who it is to be, is the question of the day. In the meantime, while we are trying to find out, and before a blow has been struck, the mere sound of his preparations is arming all Europe. England is furbishing up her fleets and calling out the militia. Austria and Prussia are fortifying their frontiers, and Belgium and Sardinia, their little host already in the field, await the future with that mute resignation which only the weak can wear. Any mail at all may now bring the news that his Imperial Majesty has let slip the dogs of war, and that the sun has again risen on Austerlitz, to set on Waterloo.

It has been so apparent, ever since the Orsini conspiracy, and the evident alarm which it inspired, that the Emperor's abject reliance on the army would force him into gratifying its passion for active service, that it can hardly be said the recent news has found anybody unprepared. Moreover, in the present temper of the soldiery, they will hardly brook delay, and whatever is to be done must be done quickly or not at all. In speculating on this very subject, a month ago, we predicted the result, which now seems imminent, and ventured to suggest Italy as the quarter in which the gathering cloud would first break. A successful war is now one of the first necessities of Louis Napoleon's existence. He must not only fight, but win, for his position after defeat or disaster would be tenfold worse than if he had never fought at all. If he resisted the demands of the army, and sacrificed himself to peace, if he fell he would at least fall with the respect of Europe, and the gratitude of his people. But the first shot fired in an unnecessary or causeless war, would cut him loose from everybody but the troops, and a series of victories are the only things that would ever bind them to his chariot wheels. We can fancy no more deplorable position than that of a despot, without military genius or military prestige, with all the hopes of his dynasty centred in a crowd of greedy and ambitious French Marshals, longing for plunder and glory. War with England seems improbable, for the simple reason that it would be war to the knife, war with a whole people, whose soil has not been invaded for centuries, and with whom hatred of Frenchmen is almost an article of faith. There would be the channel to cross in the presence of a powerful fleet—in case he attempted an invasion—and in case he did not, the conflict would be wholly maritime, and would bring neither laurels nor consolation to the army. Not only does Great Britain present fewer points of attack than any other Pewer, but no other Power in Europe possesses so many means of protracted resistance. Money is now well known to be the sinews of war, and that Government which can command the most will always, other things being equal, eventually carry the day. Besides, there is no Government in Europe in the stability of which moneyed men are so much interested, for the simple reason that no Government owes so much and pays so punctually; so that to save what is already invested, they would be only too glad to invest more. France would, unhappily for herself, find her borrowing powers terribly inferior to those of her rival, if they were engaged in a death-struggle.

Emile Girardin, who has probably supported with his pen a greater variety of governments than any other man living, has been recently circulating an address to the Emperor, in which he recommends his master to signalize his reign by a conquest of some sort, as Charles X. signalized his by the annexation of Algiers, and the Republic by the occupation of Rome, and he recommends England as affording a capital subject for the experiment. But the Emperor is wiser than his counselors, and will, if he aims at military glory at all, make sure of his mark. A march through Italy would be a series of triumphs, for the population, if not friendly, would certainly not be hostile. Rome offers a base of operations already constructed; every road and bridge and fortress bristles with souvenirs of French triumphs; the Austrian army, invincible to an armed mob, has never since the French Revolution held its ground against an equal force of disciplined troops. The Austrian Empire is torn by the hatred and dissensions of rival races; its treasury is empty, and discredited by three bankruptcies, and it has no friends. Out of its Italian dominions alone there are ample materials for the construction of a mighty Kingdom, whose bulk might well illustrate the annals of Napoleon's reign. What if he designs to present the world with another "King of Rome?"

Speedy Retribution.—One of the most deplorable results of that practical immunity from punishment which various causes concur in securing to criminals, is the disposition of peaceable men to assume the right of speedy retribution. By this is meant the prompt shooting down of any assailant, which forcible measure, it is claimed, is the only efficacious preventative.

A correspondent who signs himself "Wayne," in yesterday's Times, not only justifies in full the killing of the bully Paudeen by the bully Cunningham, but expresses regret that Mr. Simonson, a respectable man, murdered in Brooklyn by Patrick Lally, had not shot down his assailant. Now we are willing to concede that if Simonson had sent a ball through Lally's brain in season, his own life would have been saved, unless—what indeed is one of the most probable contingencies in the world—some one of Lally's associates then present, should feel called upon to shoot Simonson. Unfortunately, the violent and the vicious have always the advantage in that sort of warfare which "Wayne" looks upon with so much favor. Cowards they may be, but they are ferocious in disposition, and ever ready for "retribution," in which their movements are apt to be more "speedy" than those of any other class. If by prompt resort to homicide, in the peace-making efficacy of which our correspondent has such implicit faith, the victims were sure to belong to the side of the wrong-doers, there would be less objection to the system. But "Wayne" may be well assured that nothing could so highly gratify the rowdy population as the idea that every occurrence of wrangling was a free fight, in which it was understood that pistols and knives were to be used ad libitum. The whole tribe of Lallys, Paudeens and Cunninghams would take their chance in such affrays with alacrity. Some of them might suffer, but nothing is more certain than that when the dead and wounded came to be counted, a frightful balance would be found on the wrong side.

The right to take life in self-defence is undeniable and sacred, but it does not extend to every case of assault or threat, in which it may be supposed by the person menaced that "speedy retribution," or in other words, immediate killing, is advisable as a means of prevention. In all resorts to violence and blood the reckless and blood-thirsty are sure to have the advantage. What we require is sure legal retribution at the hands of Courts and Juries. Any other mode of repressing crime tends directly to disorder and increased insecurity.

United States Laws and Quarantine Regulations.

The arrest of Captain Judkins, of the Cunard steamship Persia, on the complaint of a Custom-House officer, who was prevented from returning to the Quarantine dock after boarding the ship on her last voyage to this City, has been made the subject of inquiry in the Imperial Parliament, and has also elicited considerable comment in the English papers. But the merits of the case not being very clearly understood on the other side of the Ocean, it was very natural that an undue importance should be attached to the affair. Captain Judkins, as we showed at the time of the occurrence, acted with perfect propriety and strictly in conformity with law; and he has been fully justified by the Grand Jury, which has refused to find a bill against him, notwithstanding the efforts that were made to procure an indictment. The Liverpool Times, in a long and fiery article upon the subject, said:

"It is, at all times, and under all circumstances, a very degrading thing for any person to be placed under arrest, and marched before a Justice; and it must be particularly galling for an officer of such standing, and one who is so universally respected and esteemed as Captain Judkins is, to be carried off his ship to answer a charge so frivolous and vexatious in the extreme. The interests of British commerce demand, we say, that some steps should be taken to prevent a repetition of such occurrences. The principle of allowing Custom-House officers to prosecute charges of this kind may lead to serious results. We perceive that Mr. Horsfall called the attention of the House to the subject last night, and commented on the fact that the laws of the State of New-York and of the United States were in direct opposition to each other. Mr. Fitzgerald, on the part of the Government, promised attention to the matter."

It is, undoubtedly, a very vexatious thing to be arrested, but it is a vexation which every one is liable to at any time, and, if no harm comes of it, the better way is to say nothing about it. We presume that Mr. Horsfall and Mr. Fitzgerald were very easily satisfied that the arrest of Captain Judkins was not a case that demanded any governmental interference. If Mr. Horsfall had taken the trouble to consult any intelligent American in London, he might have readily learned that the laws of the State of New-York and the laws of the United States do not conflict with each other, especially in relation to the Quarantine regulations. For the enlightenment of that gentleman, as well as for that of "an ignorant and obscure journal" published in this City, called the Herald, which appears to have relied upon an English paper for information on this subject, we copy from the laws of the United States, from the act entitled "An act respecting Quarantines and Health Laws," the following section, from which it will be seen that our State laws are perfectly in accord with the laws of the United States:

"Section. 1. That the Quarantines and other restraints which shall be required and established by the Health laws of any State, or pursuant thereto, respecting any vessels arriving in or bound to any port or district thereof, whether from a foreign port or place, or from another district of the United States, shall be duly observed by the Collectors and all other officers of the revenue of the United States appointed and employed for the several collection districts of such State, respectively, and by the masters and crews of the several revenue cutters, and by the military officers who shall command in any fort or station upon the sea-coast; and all such officers of the United States shall be, and they hereby are authorized and required faithfully to aid in the execution of such Quarantines and Health laws, according to their respective powers and precincts, and as they shall be directed, from time to time, by the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States; and the said Secretary shall be, and he is hereby authorized, when a conformity to such Quarantines and Health laws shall require it, and in respect to vessels which shall be subject thereto, to prolong the terms limited for the entry of the same, and the report or entry of their cargoes, and to vary or dispense with any other regulations applicable to such reports or entries.

The Quarantine laws, it will be seen from this, are supreme; and it is a matter of no small surprise that even the captain of one of our own frigates should have been so ignorant of his duty as to have defied the authority of the Health officer, as was done by the Captain of the Susquehanna.

Physiology in the Public Schools.—A Committee of the Board of Education has recommended that a lecturer be employed to teach Physiology in the Common Schools. At the first hearing, one is disposed to beg the Board of Education to do nothing of the sort. The "Course of Studies" is so full of the "ologies," and the graduating pupils so empty of even the elements of any of them, that it seems cruel to add another, lest it prove but one more method for ignorant teachers to torture innocent children by. Is there no City Missionary who will go into our Public Schools and redeem the pale and languid victims of the system of stuffing that we call Education? Miserable little wretches, they sit six hours of each hot day, stewing over mathematics that not one in ten of them does not abhor, or, if not yet grown up to the endurance of that rack, they sit gaping and despairing, while a yawning automaton tosses definitions and unintelligible formulas at them. Day after day, the teacher holds open the infant memory, as if it were an empty bag, and tucks in dry dates,—that in such a year King Phillip's war broke out, that nominative cases govern verbs in number and person, and such like,—important facts, no doubt, but compared with which even the Assembly's Catechism is succulent and spicy. Happy is the sluggish scholar whose distended memory does not react and reject this stuff, until the grave examiner has spent a day in the school, taking account of cargo by a list of stereotyped questions. For, upon the poor lad's ability to return the items, just as they went in, undigested and unaltered in word or phrase, depends his standing and promotion. If the pupil is an advanced one, and has an ambition to become a teacher, his memory-bag must have still greater powers of endurance. Its contents must be retained past the fearful examinations for a Superintendent's certificate, when they are sure to be summoned up in the order of their going in. If each date, and rule, and definition is promptly reproduced in its original wording, the candidate takes a certificate of grade A, and forthwith may spue it all out, and remember it no more for ever. Perhaps it is all for the best—this cramming for an occasion—this most laborious effort to do nothing during the school-boy period. Perhaps the stunting is necessary to preserve Yankee children from precocity. Gardeners head down their young vines to make them root better. If any analogous process is necessary, [illegible] the question that our public schools, just now, are admirably fitted to perform the wholesome process for them. Certainly, it would be difficult to devise any unimaginable method better calculated to disgust those who thirst after "useful knowledge."

Our own opinion, however, is that the schools should educate their pupils positively, that their studies should be of a sort to interest the scholar, to develop his latent reason, to create an appetite for knowledge. Now, nothing so surely as the easy philosophy of common things arouses a child. The dullest boy wakes up to see how an insect lives, and goes his strange pilgrimage from the condition of the caterpillar to that of the butterfly. The most listless are all attention to hear how plants turn the dull mould into gorgeous flowers. Children are always hot after "seeing into the in'ards of things." Nothing, it strikes us, would do so much towards breaking up the six-hours' infamous monotony of the school-day, and redeeming the schools from their well-earned character for teaching truancy, as a course of familiar lectures on the ways of life of plants and animals. The lecturer must be a man of science, but not so old in science as to have forgotten the steps by which he learned his own lessons. To do his work well would be a delicate task, but to do it badly would only be adding one more to the list of pleasant subjects spoiled to the child for life in the handling. Under favorable auspices we would like to see the experiment tried.

How to Head off Polygamy—A Bachelor in View of the Family.—The Washington Union is very greatly exercised just at present with the plurality wife system, existing among the Saints at Salt Lake. After due and deliberate reflection, that judicious organ of the Administration is satisfied that no man should have, or desire, more than one wife; that polygamy is against the laws of every State and Territory, Utah excepted; and that it is a relic of anti-Christian barbarism, which has no business to show itself in this enlightened country of ours.

But at the same time, when the question comes to a practical form, the Union is distressed what to advise. It is quite sure, upon consideration, that neither Congress nor the President can meddle with it. The affair, it says, belongs exclusively to the Mormons themselves, and must stand or fall by the local law of Utah Territory. Having thus thrown off all present responsibility, the Union breathes freer and deeper. But no sooner has it reached this mental calm than intelligence comes that Eccles, the Federal Judge, has enjoined upon a Utah Grand Jury the duty of finding indictments for polygamy. Here is the whole difficulty renewed, and in a very troublesome form. Why could not that pig-headed official refrain from such a windmill attack upon the peculiar institution of the Saints?

Yet, as it would never do for the President's organ to be caught without provision for an emergency, the Union of Wednesday announces the mode by which polygamy is to be eventually rooted out. The remedy for this social disease is worth patenting. Its simplicity is equal to its efficacy, and its efficacy as great as its simplicity. The Union will wait till Utah makes application for admission as a State, and the moment that happens, will take the ground, with crushing effect, that polygamy is anti-republican. For why?

"The Family," says the Union, "is the foundation of the Republic. In our polity we have three corner-stone institutions: the Family, the State, and the Confederacy. Without the family, the State cannot be republican; and unless the government of the State be republican, it cannot under the Constitution—it cannot in the nature of things, be a member of the confederacy. Should a new State present itself, therefore for admission into the Union, authorizing a principle so much at war, not merely with republicanism, but with civilization itself, as polygamy, it would not only be competent for Congress, but obligatory upon it, to inquire, whether admission should not be denied for the reason that this form of government was not republican?

An exposition of constitutional and social law so luminous neither requires nor admits of comment. Henceforth there will be no question as to the course to be pursued. History will record that a bachelor President, after an experience of three score and ten years, decides that "the family is the foundation of the Republic," and "without the family the State cannot be Republican."

French Passports and American Travelers.—The Moniteur, in its article of the 25th of March last, on the new French Passport regulations, said:

"French Diplomatic and Consular agents have retained the power of demanding the appearance of the bearers of passports to which their visa is necessary. This power evidently results from the spirit of legislation already in force; but the obligation which it imposes on travelers is not absolute, and every latitude for appreciating the cases of exception is left to the agents of the Emperor, who are, moreover, authorized to grant, without exacting the presence of interested parties, their visa to the passports issued by the competent authorities of the foreign States to their own countrymen, whenever those passports shall be addressed to such agents by the Government of those States, with special recommendation and upon their responsibility."

It would appear from this that the French Consul in the United States, as elsewhere, has the right to compel those of our people who want his visa to appear before him. The right is discretionary, according to the Moniteur, but we know of one case, at least, where two ladies were obliged to appear at the French Consulate in this City, in order that the Consul might see whether the descriptions in the passports were correct. It seems to us that this is a nuisance that ought to be abated.

Chinese in California.—Recently a law has been passed by the Legislature of California, absolutely prohibiting the immigration of Chinese or Mongolians into that State. This statute takes effect on the 1st of October next, and has been printed in the Chinese language for distribution in Asia, in order to prevent future emigration. After the above-mentioned date any persons landing emigrants from China will be punishable with a fine of six hundred dollars, or with imprisonment from three to twelve months, for every emigrant landed.

This legislation may seem to theorists a species of unjustifiable exclusiveness little better than that so long practiced by Japan. But no one who understands the intense debasement of the Chinese character will censure the Legislature of California for the step it has taken. For unless the emigration from China to our Pacific Coast be checked, California, Oregon and Washington Territory will, ere twenty years have passed, be little better than a Chinese colony. The question is not only serious but vital, whether our people west of the Rocky Mountains are willing to be overwhelmed and swallowed up by the countless millions ready to pour in from China. That vast empire swarms with a population, comprising one-third of the entire human family. Shall we open our country to this population, or shall we close it? If the one may as well dismiss at once all expectations of maintaining any characteristic nationality to our Christian civilization.

The Quiet Sunday Movement.—We have a document of sixteen pages from the Sabbath Committee, grouping the memorial against Sunday news-sales with the comments of the city Press. The occasion is thus furnished for saying that the Committee, and the highly respectable citizens uniting in their memorial, deserve the thanks of the entire community for the wisdom and patience manifested in bringing this subject before the public in a way to receive practical results. So many mistakes have been made by reformers, that it is matter of gratulation to find one scheme entered on and carried out without ultraisms or excesses of any sort. Hence, the false issues attempted to be raised by interested parties in this case, have proved utter failures. We trust a similar degree of prudence will characterize the future movements of all engaged in this reform.

Agassiz not Going to Paris.—We stated a few days since, on the strength of an announcement in the London Athenæum, that Professor Agassiz had been induced by the liberal offers of the Emperor of the French, to consent to go to Paris; but we are happy to learn from a more reliable source, that the great naturalist has determined not to leave his adopted country, even for the honor of becoming a French Senator and Director of the Jardin des Plantes. He prefers Boston to Paris, and Republicanism to Imperialism.

Amusements.

The Grand Musical Festival at the Academy of Music comes off to-morrow—at least the musical part thereof. The programme is all that could be wished on such an occasion. On Monday the pic-nic will take place at Jones's Wood, where an open air concert, with 1400 performers, will be given. The feature of to-morrow's concert is Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, which will be played for the first time in many years, and with a completeness which has never before been approached. The orchestra will consist of three hundred performers, and for the choral hymn in the last movement, a chorus of three hundred, assisted by a quartette composed of Madame Caradori, Madame Zimmerman, Mr. Pico and Mr. Weinlich. In addition to this great work, the orchestra and chorus will perform the following pieces: The overture to "Oberon;" grand chorus from the "Magic Flute;" overture by Robert Schumann; chorus from the "Creation;" and the coronation march from the "Prophete." Messrs. Max Maretzek, Carl Anschütz and Carl Bergmann are the conductors of the instrumental department, and Messrs. Paul and E. Weber of the vocal. The proceeds of the entertainment are to be applied to charitable purposes, and we hope, therefore, they will be large and generous as the undertaking.

Academy of Music.—There will be an opera matinée here to-day, consisting of the entire opera of "La Traviata."

Mrs. Blunt's Readings.—This lady gave her second public reading on Thursday evening last, in the Chapel of the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute. It was an eminently pleasing performance. Her reading is that of a refined and accomplished woman, delicate in appreciation, clear in interpretation and exquisitely tasteful in manner. With none of the adventitious advantages arising from professional experience and familiarity with the popular tastes, she arrested the attention of her auditors at once, and held it without wavering to the close. We are not sure indeed that she did not owe the principal part of her success to the absence of every thing like professional trickery or contrivance, to that perfect freshness and simplicity of manner which made you forget the artist in the woman. Mrs. B. has the advantages of personal beauty and high social culture; you feel at once that you are in the presence of a true lady, pure and good. Her voice is one of those magnetic voices, whose penetrative sweetness makes itself heard and felt throughout a large assembly, notwithstanding the want of volume of which we are occasionally sensible, and which with Mrs. B. is manifestly not the want of power but of practice. Mrs. Blunt is the widow of an esteemed officer of our navy, and is endeavoring, by these readings, to secure support for herself and family. The object she has in view must win general sympathy, while the excellence of her performance commands universal admiration.

Close of the Business Men's Prayer-Meeting in No. 175 Broadway.

In consequence of repairs about to be made in the building No. 175 Broadway, the second floor of which was opened for a business man's daily prayer-meeting on the 4th of April last, and which has been uninterruptedly devoted to that purpose with, it is said, great religious benefit, up to the present time, the closing meeting was held yesterday afternoon at 3½ o'clock. Notwithstanding the great heat of the day, the room was crowded almost to suffocation, and certainly to the dissolving point, for the perspiration poured down every face in copious streams.

Dr. Hague presided, and gave out the 116th psalm, which was sung by the assemblage.

The 27th psalm was then read, and the President offered prayer, returning especial thanks to Providence for our preservation, during this heated weather, from all plagues and pestilences.

The 119th psalm was sung, and the President again spoke, adverting to the fact that this was the last meeting of the season, and congratulating the business men on the effects of the revival which had taken place, and on the manifest earnestness and zeal which had been displayed by those who took part in it, and yielded to its saving influences.

The Rev. Dr. Spring sincerely reiterated the expressions of the President, and heartily thanked his Maker that he had seen this day in his old age—a day which he had never expected to witness. He urged on the merchants the obligation not to forget the hours which they had spent in spiritual communion in the apartments which they were now to quit forever, and the duty of continuing their pious labors under all circumstances, whether of recreation or of business.

The 25th psalm was then sung, and prayer was offered and offered for the sick wife of a merchant, and also for a brother and cousin, who were still out of the ark of safety.

The Rev. Dr. Bethune paid a tribute of praise to the integrity and religious fervor of the merchants of New-York, and said there was no guard for honor, honesty and truth in business, but the fear of God. He dwelt on the necessity of persevering in the cause of Christ, regardless of apparent results, for success was not our duty—that was in the hands of God—but work was our duty, and he who worked faithfully would have his reward. New-York was prominently before this country as a place of prayer, and it was incumbent on them, wherever they met, that the consciousness of their having God in their hearts should be spoken through their lips.

Mr. Wetmore advocated the need of a movement to elevate the masses, and dwelt on the benefits that would accrue from a sincere effort, on the part of men of means, to bring the police, the firemen, the omnibus-drivers, the coach-drivers, and ten thousand times ten others within the influence of religious teaching and example. He made special allusion to the great proportion of youth over manhood as the perpetrators of crime, and earnestly recommended the project of providing religious training for the young.

The Rev. Dr. Mason said, and vouched for the truth of the story, that a Roman Catholic who had been invited to attend the Fulton-street meeting last week, consented to go, and had not been twelve minutes present when he said he was perfectly satisfied he had been all wrong, and gave up his Romanism, and asserted that, in giving it up, he felt he gave his heart to God.

Prayer was invoked for the Police, with the hope that they might be enlisted under "The Great Captain."

Sergeant Jones rose and said he was truly thankful to God for the opportunity of coming among Christian people, as it was certainly a great pleasure to him to be where the people of God were. Two years ago he saw the Saviour, and since that time, through all difficulties and dangers, he saw Him, as the sailor said, shining ahead. Two years ago he never thought of asking a blessing on his meals, or of saying family prayer; now, scarce is he set down, a morsel never entered his lips without asking a blessing on the food, and family prayer was invariably offered. He had had a companion who started with him in the struggle of life, but, he was sorry to say, she had become a little lukewarm; but, blessed be God, he had never faltered, and as he had already done, he would still consider it so to be his duty to scour these lower Wards every Sabbath, not to make any boast of it, but because he loved the God who had so favored him."

A resolution conveying the thanks of the meeting to the proprietors of the store was unanimously adopted, and the meeting dispersed.

Slave-Trade Correspondence Between United States and Great Britain.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

Washington, Tuesday, June 16, 1857.

I have rarely read a more interesting document than the message of the President, under the date of 21st April, to the Senate, communicating the correspondence between the American and British Governments, on the African Slave-Trade. The public were first apprised, through the correspondence of the Times, that, after the receipts of many communications on the subject from her Majesty's Government, General Cass had made a general and comprehensive reply, fully setting forth the views of this Government. The correspondence was, in due time, called for by the Senate, and now appears in pamphlet.

The first paper shows "the ruling passion strong in death." It is a note of three lines from Mr. Crampton, dated May 31, 1856, furnishing, for the information of the State Department, [illegible] ds, from the British Commissioners at [illegible] West Coast of Africa, [illegible] the slave-trade was carried on in the year 1855. Three days after the receipt of this letter, Mr. Crampton was peremptorily dismissed.

The Commissioners assert that on the 31st of December, 1855, a vessel believed to be American shipped 500 slaves from a point on the coast of Benguela. They proceed: One Lucas, a notorious slave dealer, driven off in 1855, had lately reappeared; had offered 50 or 60 "Mirico" per head for slaves.

Aug. 2, 1857.—Lord Napier informed General Cass of the cases of the brigantines Adams Gray and W. D. Miller, of New-Orleans. It appeared from the report of the British Consul at Loanda that about the 1st of February, 1857, the Adams Gray was captured by the British steamer Pr[illegible] with all the usual equipments for a slave [illegible] and with $20,500 in specie. She threw [illegible] her Spanish-American papers, and, having [illegible] dence of nationality, was condemned.

The Captain of the W. D. Miller was more sagacious and astute. He kept his American [illegible] sailed boldly through a fleet of British [illegible] men in Lagos Roads, was pursued, showed his American papers, and avowed that the purpose of his voyage was to ship slaves.

On the 16th September, 1857, Lord Napier sends to General Cass a resolution of the House of Commons, praying Her Majesty to use all practicable means to suppress the slave-trade, to which Her Majesty graciously responds that she will.

Oct. 19.—Com. Conover, commanding American squadron on the coast of Africa, writes to Mr. Toucey concerning the capture, by Com. Wise, in the British steamer Vesuvius, of the brigantine Bremen, wearing American colors. It appears that, on the 10th of October, 1857, the Bremen was overhauled by the Vesuvius—that Com. Wise went on board, saying in effect, "I do not want to see your papers, which I know are fraudulent, but shall take the vessel, and I now give you the choice of being taken under the American flag or otherwise." The captain said that, if taken as an American, he would be liable to be hanged as a pirate, and threw his flag and papers overboard. This conduct Com. Conover thought unwarrantable, and he sent to Com. Wise a protest against it, remarking that this practice of the British commanders sufficiently shows why so many vessels are taken without colors or papers—the reason being, in brief, that the masters are induced to destroy them by the threats and misrepresentations of the British boarding officers.

Oct. 13, 1857.—Edward Gardner, who appears to be British Consul, or Agent, at Loanda, states that the American vessel Onward had been captured by the steamer Electa, without any proofs of nationality. The ship or bark Charles, of Boston, was found by the steamer Sapphire embarking slaves at Cavecca de Cabra, (Copper Head;) was chased, and ran upon the breakers; by which accident 200 slaves were drowned—300 captured—and the captain and crew, with part of the slaves, escaped. The Myrmidon caught an American brig near the same place.

The Consul is grieved to inform the Commodore that slavers, under the American flag, infest the coast in greater numbers than ever before. Among those then prowling about for slaves, he names the barks Petrel and Clara R. Williams; the schooners Crimean, Louis McLane and Wildwood, and the brigs Jamestown and Brenen. A good-sized fleet, it must be admitted, for an illicit and persecuted traffic.

Oct. 19, 1857.—Com. Conover sends a strongly-expressed protest against the seizure of the Bremen to Rear-Admiral Sir F. W. Grey. He declares the act in contravention of the treaty of the neutral rights of Americans, and of the right of the American Government to catch and punish slavers against her own laws.

Dec. 24, 1857.—Lord Napier sends a long and important dispatch to Gen. Cass, covering the whole subject of the Slave-trade. He describes eight cases of vessels being taken and condemned as slavers while wearing the American flag. In addition he stated that Portuguese men-of-war had captured the General Pierce and the Ad[illegible], which the latter was fitted for the reception of a thousand slaves. These ten vessels were all captured during the "earlier [illegible] of 1857. Lord Napier then proceeds to [illegible] teen other American vessels be[illegible] in the Slave-trade. Among them [illegible] of '76, the Putnam, and the [illegible] The case of the North Hand was [illegible] had been chartered for the ostensible purpose of conveying food to the starving In[illegible] Cape de Verde Islands. The British [illegible] ironically observed: "In this affair, where benevolence was made subservient to crime, the notorious house of Figueiredo, Ramos & Co. was busy."

Mr. Figueiredo is Consul of Portugal in New-York. After remarking that the American complement of vessels and guns under the treaty was not at all times kept up, Lord N. concludes with more general moral reflections on the Slave-trade.

April 13, 1857.—Commissary Judge Crawford, at Havana, writes to the Earl of Clarendon that, for many years the expeditions to the coast of Africa have not been so numerous as now that he has good reason to know that fifteen vessels had been fitted out for the Slave-trade in New-Orleans within two months.

Aug. 4, 1857.—The British Commissioners at Havana report that the Spanish brig Three Brothers has been altered and rechristened with the American name Elize, and sent off upon a slave voyage. Also that the American ship [illegible], 499, brigs Woodward and Brahman, the schooner Niagara, and the Peruvian ship Architect, were in Havana, preparing for slave voyages. An American named Drinkwater calling himself a resident of Portland, was the purchaser and outfitter of all these vessels. The Commissioners say that the W. D. Miller, the same American brig which, about May 13, 1857, was boarded by British officers near Loanda, showed American papers, and declared the object of their voyage was the Slave-trade. This same vessel landed near Sierra Morena, in Cuba, 415 Bonsis, and was then burnt. Ten days before this occurrence 450 were landed at Vertientes.

Feb. 2, 1857.—Mr. Gardner writes from Loanda to the Earl of Clarendon that—

"The whole, or nearly the whole, of the Slave-trade at present carried on at this part of the Coast is for the supply of Cuba, and pursued under the American flag."

The same authority says: "Only three vessels were captured on the coast South of the Equator in 1856." One of these was the General Pierce, which was seized on her third voyage for slaves. As the chief haunt of the slavers is north of the Congo, he suggests that an American vessel-of-war be permanently stationed off that coast.

July 6, 1857.—The British Consul at Loanda writes Lord Clarendon that all the slave vessels [illegible]

[illegible] of this date, probably [illegible] on board the Cumberland, [illegible] account of the capture of the slaver Cortez, in the river [illegible]. The death of her being a slaver were about as clear as that there is water in the sea; but she was not molested, though visited by boats from the Cumberland. This Cortez is the same vessel whose capture, one day out of Havana, and condemnation at Jamaica last April, caused the commencement of the excitement relative to British Aggression.

JAN. 7, 1858.—Lord NAPIER furnishes to Gen. CASS the particulars of the destruction of the bark Charles, of Baltimore, on the 19th September. Lord N. estimates the number of slaves on board this vessel at 1,200, "of whom only 358 could be saved." This is the same vessel so often spoken of in the correspondence.

JAN. 15, 1858.—Lord NAPIER, to Gen. CASS, states that the Charles cleared at New-Orleans with a manifest which might have awakened the suspicions of the Federal authorities and justified the detention of the ship. In the same letter he describes several captures of American slavers by the Queen's ships, and the escape of the James Pickman with 300 slaves, though chased by the Tenedos, with doubtful sails, for 140 miles. Old Black was always good at foiling the British.

AUG. 12, 1857.—Capt. BURGESS, of the Hecate steamer, that a new company for slave-trading had been formed at Havana, called the "Expedition for Africa," shares $1,000, which are posted on the Exchange.

MARCH 8.—General CASS writes to Collector WHARTON, of New-Orleans, stating that Lord NAPIER had imputed blame to the officers of the Custom-House at that place for allowing the Charles to be cleared.

MARCH 18.—The Collector replies that the Charles was cleared before he assumed office, but that the schooner Louis McLane was cleared notwithstanding his opposition, in the face of undoubted evidence that she was to be engaged in the Slave-trade. She was arrested, and the case was [illegible] in the Circuit Court of the United States. The proceedings were a naked and expensive farce, and the vessel sailed to Africa, and was [illegible].

[illegible] having collected all this information, and poising himself upon the pinnacle of this accumulated correspondence, Gen. CASS comes down upon Lord NAPIER and the public with fourteen pages of imperial octavo, not traversing any fact stated by Lord NAPIER, but presenting in a rambling desultory manner the views of this Government on the African slave-trade, and all the questions connected with it. I will not criticize this document further than to say that it is one of which this Government ought to be ashamed. It admits the flagitious character of the Slave-trade, but petulantly and querulously objects to any and all measures which are, or have been, proposed to suppress it.

In truth, Gen. CASS does much worse than this, because, after expressing the hope or the wish that the trade were rooted out, he proceeds to notice with real pleasure, and with unsuppressed exultation, that it was not to be suppressed at all, because of the renewal of the business in the disguised form of the emigration system.

FEB. 19, 1858.—Minister MASON writes to General CASS an important letter on the French scheme, in which he makes the statement that Count WALEWSKI told him (Mr. MASON) that the British Government would not object to the French scheme while the wants of the British colonies were being supplied by the Coolie trade." Judge Mason then goes off into a page or two of desperate and dignified condemnation of French and British fanaticism, relative to Slavery, which he supposes will find in this new measure of the Imperial Government a rebuke which it will deeply feel.

But I find that this synopsis cannot be completed within reasonable length in one communication. With the leave of your readers, I shall finish it in another letter. A.

The Course of the Democratic Party.

[illegible] Albany, June 24.

[illegible] (N. Y.) Regency of July 22 con[illegible] the position of the Democratic party, from which we extract the following portions:

"We hold that any professed Democrat who attempts to strike down the great leader of the Northwestern Democracy, for the sake of perpetuating dissensions, is himself recreant to the interests of the party. We advocate the reelection of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS, not because of his views on Lecompton, nor merely because it would be a disgrace to him if he, at present, had been anyone else, but because we know of no Illinois statesman who can urge such paramount claims to the support of his party; none who has served the party so well; none who has been more faithfully and consistently devoted to the doctrines of State Rights and State Equality; none who can bring the same amount of moral force and intellectual ability to the aid of these great principles.

"The unnecessary and subject abuse of Anti-Lecompton Democrats has already done harm enough to raise the hopes of the Opposition, and if pursued in most produce a struggle which will either divide the party irretrievably or crush the minorities of the strife. The purpose of the Lecompton men have evidently been to reduce a policy of submission to as extreme as it is inexciting, and if it succeed in reducing the Democracy to be hewed into submission by injurious and absurd. The two measures of party power, the Lecompton and the Lecompton laws. There is no other practical alternative.

"We believe, however, as well as we do, that the Anti-Lecompton Democrats, not only of Illinois, but of Virginia, will never submit to a Lecompton Conference; and we believe, moreover, that in a democratic platform the adoption of either of the Lecompton schedules, or the Lecompton laws, will meet with unyielding opposition.

"The issue of one experiment of this sort is now pending in North Carolina. It is already boasted that the Lecompton clique of the southern has driven off the Anti-Lecompton Democracy to the support of the independent candidate for Governor, whether this be true or not, it is sufficient to illustrate the folly of deliberately alienating allegiance against the Democratic ticket, by raising unnecessary issues. If, then, it is not only useless, but dangerous, to make Lecompton a Democratic test, it must certainly be deemed advisable to abstain from revived issues and abuse, which can serve no purpose, but to keep alive political rancor and personal animosities."

Thus speaks the Regency. And we do not conceal it, that recent events in different parts of the country compel us to declare that, in every word, it speaks the whole truth. That portion of the Democratic Party with which we associated, so soon as the Administration unexpectedly recommended the unconditional acceptance of the Lecompton Constitution, and to which belong the masses of the Democracy in the Northern States, and a considerable number in the South, has left no honorable means unemployed, and does even now desire, to prevent a disruption of the party into Lecompton and Anti-Lecompton. As long as this struggle had a direct object, we did not hesitate to perform what we conceived to be our duty. Regardless as to whom our censure might affect—regardless whether this or that man felt disinclined at the free language of truth—we pursued the path marked out by what we conscientiously believed to be the only true construction of Democratic principles. After, by the enactment in Congress of the so-called English Compromise bill, the disputed point had, for the time, been decided, and decided in a manner by which the voice of the people of Kansas was first to be heard before they should be received into the Union as an organized State, we declared ourselves satisfied to the extent that we had, and would always, willingly submit to the decision of the inhabitants of that Territory. With this decision, and the acquiescence in it, the quarrel ought to be ended. At least, we hoped it would be so, and our endeavors to reestablish the unity of the party, bear witness to our sincerity. But, unfortunately, there are a number of men in the party, who, in their eagerness to convince the President of their ready servility, forget all limits of reasonable moderation, and every consideration of loyalty to their party. Look, for instance, at the political condition of Illinois. In obedience to the call of the Central Committee, a Convention of Democrats assembled at Springfield on April 21. One of the resolutions of that Convention declares that they will not make, nor will permit any one to make, Lecompton or anti-Lecomptonism a test of party fealty, and that they will not proscribe any Democrat simply because he may have coincided in opinion with the Lecomptonites. During the whole time since past, the friends of this Convention and their organs in the Press—(and nine-tenths of all Democratic newspaper in Illinois side with them)—have always openly asserted that they will recognize all as Democrats who adhere to the Cincinnati Platform, whether they have been for or against Lecompton. But this conciliatory position of the Democratic Party in Illinois did not satisfy the sycophants in the Federal offices in that State. They held another Convention, they nominated another set of candidates, whom they authoritatively call "Democratic," and openly announce that they will have achieved their object if they succeed in dividing the party in the State, to defeat a Democrat, Douglas, and to make the Black Republican candidate, Lincoln, President. They, the Federal office-holders, refuse to acknowledge any support whatever, unless the party shall yield to their conditions."

Is that Democratic? This course has estranged a large portion of the Democracy to such an extent, that many who, without question, took part in the "Bolters' Convention," have left them and rejoined the Democracy.

No better do we find it in Indiana. In consequence of maneuvers of the Federal officers there, per fas and nefas, to make Lecomptonism the test question of Democracy, a schism has been brought about, and there are already in the first and third Congressional districts two Democratic candidates in the field. From Pennsylvania we but lately announced that in the Twentieth District, Mr. MONTGOMERY was nominated by 1,500 majority, and already we are informed that the Postmasters and their followers accord the nomination to Mr. LOGAN, who opposed MONTGOMERY, and was beaten by an overwhelming majority of Democratic voters.

And how is it here in New-York? Were it not our duty fearlessly to expose the prevailing evil, we would prefer to leave to its own shame that baseless sycophancy which everywhere thrusts itself forward.

In Democratic Clubs they pass resolutions lauding to the skies the Lecompton policy of the Administration, and denounce all true and consistent Democrats; and next day the President of one of these Clubs travels on to Washington himself, to present these resolves, with a view to ingratiate himself with the authorities, and to further his chances for the fat office he seeks;—the President of another "Democratic" Association rushes headlong to the Custom-house, there to obtain an appointment on the strength of his resolutions. On the occasion of the confirmation of his appointment by the Senate, a Federal officer is honored with a serenade, and he seizes the opportunity to extol Lecomptonism in most laudative terms. They march with trumpets and tinsel before the house of a returned Congressman, and know no bounds in their denunciations of those who took the liberty to deny that Lecomptonism embodied anything like Democratic principles. And all this is done for the only reason that Lecomptonism has offices to bestow. It is the eternal hunt after more or less remunerative official positions in the Federal offices here, as well as in Illinois, in Indiana, in Ohio, in Pennsylvania and everywhere—it is the hungry eagerness of office-seekers, who presume upon dictating to the Democratic Party, who try to outdo each other in manifestations of servility, and of whom each one claims for himself the doubtful honor to be the most violent Lecomptonite, the truest adherent of the Administration.

If we have judged aright the personal character of the President, he must feel disgusted at this unprincipled race among his pretended friends. It is almost impossible that he, whom the Democratic Party has elevated to the highest position in the country, and in all the world, could or should approve of the doings of his officers, trying by their intrigues to bring defeat upon the party and to misuse his name in their detestable work. We cannot, as yet, believe that he should be satisfied, if his subordinates, by their anti-Democratic proceedings, and simply on account of the offices they hold, exert themselves to ruin the party. We hope even, that before it is too late—and very soon it may be too late—he will interpose his authority to prevent further mischief.

We confess, without reserve, that it ought to be the duty of all Federal officers to conciliate the masses of the Democracy rather than still more to exasperate them. And we call the attention of these gentlemen and of all office-seeking cliques, here and elsewhere, to the circumstance that the democratic mind of the people of this country will never submit to Lecomptonism, but is left the question rest. Should this latter course be decided on in the circles of the so-called friends of the Administration,—then we can act unitedly and present a solid phalanx to the enemy,—if not, the responsibility for the defeat of the Democracy must fall upon their heads. Do they wish to see the party victorious, then they have only to follow our advice, to consider the interests of the party of higher moment than those of their own self, to place the success of Democratic principles and the welfare of our institutions above office-hunting, and we are satisfied we are a unit. If not—not!

NIAGARA FALLS.

Opening of the Season—The River Swollen—Miscellaneous Matters.

Correspondence of the New-York Times:

NIAGARA FALLS, Monday, June 21, 1858.

As yet the number of visitors here is unusually small, less even than last year. It is expected, however, that in some measure, at least, the deficiency will be made up from the South, where, it is agreed, the late rains and floods will produce a state of things that will drive northward those who can leave. The appearance of yellow fever at New-Orleans would be regarded with interest by hotel-keepers, and many others here, and at the watering-places generally.

The hotels, the ferries, the keepers of curiosity shops, and the thousand and one other people, who make their living out of visitors, (not to forget the extortionate hackmen,) are ready and waiting, not patiently, however, for the crowd to come. Indian Curiosity Shops are thicker than ever, and the imposition attempted on every corner, in the sale of trinkets called "Rock Ornaments," carved in various shapes from common spar, but pretendedly from the famous fallen Table Rock, is carried to an unheard-of extent. I am assured that this and other traffic in "curiosities," (Indian and civilized,) amounts to a large sum in the aggregate, enough to support a community. An instance is related of an Englishman who purchased some $75 worth of these "Rock Ornaments" to take back to his own country, as rare curiosities carved from Table Rock. His mortification and anger may be imagined, when he ascertained that they were made from spar, the like of which abounded all around him, and was considered wholly worthless at home, but with which the Yankees, with a little ingenuity, had succeeded in duping him, as they will thousands of others.

The volume of water to the Niagara is swollen to an unprecedented extent. I saw the venerable General WEMPLE, whose long and active life has been spent within the roar of the Cataract, regarding for the first time the magnificent exhibition consequent on high the water. Lake Erie is some five feet higher than usual. The tide rushing down the river and over the Falls, is considerably increased beyond this while in the gorge below, at the whirlpool and vicinity, it is said the water rushes over the perpendicular banks full fifteen feet higher up than ever known before. The attractions of the Falls are increased in a corresponding degree. They who are here now are fortunate.

A slide occurred on the railroad which winds along the gorge between Lewiston and Suspension Bridge, on Friday evening last, under circumstances that causes one to realize how constant and imminent are the perils of travel by rail, even under the most favorable circumstances. This road, for most of the distance, is on the very brink of the gorge, in some places hundreds of feet above the river; sometimes inserted into the perpendicular ledge, with large masses of rocks suspended fearfully over the track. At a point about mid-way between the Falls and Lewiston, where the track lies about two hundred feet above the river, and where the descent is nearly perpendicular, nearly seventy feet of the road-bed slid off. The cob-house, perpendicular wall, no broader at the base than at the top, which was relied upon to make things safe, began to give away, (as the track master assured me,) nearly or quite a week before. The giving out of the whole structure had been looked upon as certain for some time, and yet cars filled with passengers continued to be drawn at least twice a day. Such recklessness is without a parallel in railway management. A gentleman, who was too late for the train, started to walk that evening over the track from Lewiston to Suspension Bridge. It was he who first discovered the slide, but he came within a hair's breadth of going down the chasm himself. Not dreaming of anything of the sort, he walked to the very brink before he discovered, by the dim light of the moon, the fearful state of the case. Another step and it would have been the last of him. Fortunately, he caught a glimpse of the yawning gulf. His retrograde movement was both timely and rapid. The slide had probably taken place immediately on the passing over of the train but a short time before, for the rocks were then tumbling and crashing into the abyss, and the gentleman felt sensibly the earth give way under his feet as he sprang back. No mortal can tell how near destruction and total annihilation that train of cars came. Its own weight and motion, doubtless, started the avalanche. Its speed—an instant of time—a finger's weight—may have been all that stood between eternity and every soul on board. But the train did pass, the pleasure seeking passengers all unconscious of the danger they had escaped. And yet for days previous the trains had been exposed to this danger, and an officer in charge of the road assured me that he knew it. When informed at the office at Suspension Bridge that a slide had occurred, they knew precisely where to locate it, and said they had been expecting it for a week, and still had been sending out trains each way twice a day all the while. Words cannot express the culpability of those in immediate authority. A presentation by the Grand Jury of Niagara County will probably attempt it.

The Joint Board of Directors of the Suspension Bridge have lately held their annual meeting here. The stock is in few hands, and, being productive, a dividend is declared three and four times a year. The business of the past year has sympathized with the general prostration; nevertheless, the dividends will be equal to about anything in the country. A very large sum—enough in itself to make the stock very handsome—is received from the railroad, which is secure under lease for many years. In addition, the revenue derived from carriages, passengers in them, and footmen, at times reaches as high as $400 a-day. As an enterprise of boldness, and as a structure of matchless perfection, this bridge has not its equal; nor has it as a monopoly. It was, perhaps, but right that the law should secure to the projectors a monopoly for their enterprise and boldness in venturing half a million in its construction. LAFARGE.—At Glen Cove, L. I., suddenly, at his country residence, at 2 o'clock A. M., on Friday, June 25, JOHN LAFARGE, Esq., native of France, aged 72 years.

The funeral will take place from his late residence in this City.

SUTHER.—At Huntington, L. I., on Thursday, June 24, ELNOR C. MURRAY, wife of HENRY G. SUTHER.

THE REV. T. WALSH WILL (D. V.) preach in the Ebenezer Chapel, in 20d-st., east of 2d-av., on SABBATH, the 27th inst., at 10½ A. M., and 7½ P. M. Evening subject—The Right and Duty of all to read the Holy Scriptures. A cordial for the times.

What, is to prevent great [illegible] attached to the [illegible] of [illegible] and [illegible] of [illegible] environment.

This nourishment is made up of those grain chemically known as [illegible]

The mechanical mating contributes most [illegible] ment, and cooking, also, an active principle, which when received into the stomach, is a component of healthy chyle digestion.

These great nourishing and invigorating properties grain produce under the action of heat, and by the aid of certain machinery, a most powerful stimulant.

If such a product can be extracted from grain by mechanical means, it indicates unmistakably the influence which the saccharine matter, or sugar property in wheat, has upon the bodily powers of man, when subjected to the natural chemical action of the human stomach.

It seems, therefore, that this is an indispensable property of grain as a nourishment, given to it for the most beneficent purpose, and consequently should be retained, as far as practicable, in all the preparations of grain for food.

Wing's process secures the highest amount of nutriment that has ever been produced from wheat.

In the preparation of the material used in the manufacture of WING'S FARINA CRACKERS, the life supporting principle of the grain remains, not destroyed or injured, as in flour, by too close grinding, but retaining its most active properties, so necessary to digestion, and the energizing force with which it imparts to the body's healthful growth or renewed vigor and strength.

The continually-increasing demand for WING'S FARINA CRACKERS, with the commendatory remarks of parents, teachers and physicians, is strong proof of the healthful and beneficial effects which have attended their use.

WING'S CRACKERS have a pleasant taste, are kindly upon the stomach, and for dyspeptic or the aged, as well as sedentary and delicate persons generally, they are most acceptable.

It is believed that there never has been anything introduced equal to WING'S FARINA CRACKERS as a healthful nourishment for children.

In purchasing, it should be borne in mind that there are no genuine Farina Crackers made but by Mr. WING; his are the only crackers manufactured in the United States containing the true qualities of farina.

All other so-called Farina Crackers are imitations. Take none, therefore, for farina but those having the name of A. WING stamped on each cracker.

WING'S FARINA CRACKERS may be procured of the best family Grocers generally, by whom they are extensively sold in different portions of the United States, and at wholesale only of A. N. THOMPSON & CO., Nos. 221 and 223 Fulton-st., New-York.

ARTHUR'S SELF-SEALING CANS AND JARS.

Since the introduction of these now celebrated Cans and Jars, over

HALF A MILLION HAVE BEEN SOLD, and notwithstanding all sorts of contrivances for the accomplishment of the same object, most of which were little less than frauds upon housekeepers, have been offered to the public, the simplicity of ARTHUR'S, the ease with which they are managed, and the certainty of result, have made them the favorite Cans and Jars everywhere; and now, in

since their introduction, their reputation stands, by general acknowledgment, far above any other can or jar in the market. In proof of this, we quote, from almost innumerable testimonials, this one from the

in the number for July, 1856. He says:

"These celebrated Cans and Jars, the first introduced, and, by all odds, the best, are steadily coming into general use. Thousands of housekeepers, who, in past seasons, were tempted to try other cans and jars, and who lost more or less of their fruit in consequence, will be glad to learn that ARTHUR'S never fails. For two seasons we have sold, use no other, and we repeat the advice."

ALL PREPARED FOR SEALING.

They have a channel around the mouth, on the outside, filled with cement when sold, and all ready for sealing. You have, after filling your vessel with hot fruit, only to heat your lid, and press it into the cement, when the work is done. If directions are followed carefully, success is always certain.

PATENT STAMP.

☞ Take notice, that Arthur's Cans and Jars all bear the Patent Stamp. On the Tin Cans you will find it impressed in the metal; on the Earthenware Jars, in an oval on the bottom; and in raised letters on the sides of the Glass Jars.

SIZES AND MATERIAL.

TIN CANS—Pint, quart, half gal. and gal.
FIRE-PROOF STONEWARE (CASE-COL.) JARS—Pint, quart and half-gallon.
QUEENSWARE—Pint, quart and half-gal.
GLASS—Pint, quart and half-gallon.
} The Cans & Jars (except glass) NEST, to secure economy in freight.

ARTHUR'S SELF-SEALING CANS AND JARS are manufactured, under the patent for the United States, by

ARTHUR, BURNHAM & GILROY,

Nos. 117 and 119 South 10th-st., Philadelphia.

Also, manufacturers, under the patent for the United States, of the "OLD-DOMINION" COFFEE-POT.

Trade supplied, at manufacturers' prices, by E. P. TORREY, No. 9 Platt-st., New-York; CHAS. BURNHAM, Springfield, Mass; JOSEPH R. GREEN, corner of 5th and Smith sts., Cincinnati, Ohio.

BALL, BLACK & CO. SILVER WARE.

BALL, BLACK & CO. invite special attention to their stock of silver ware, which is now unusually large, affording a variety of pattern and design surpassing any to be found in any house in the United States, and of finer quality than is manufactured in any part of the world.

OUR STANDARD of silver is.....950-1,000 parts pure.
The English sterling silver is.....925-1,000 parts pure.
The American and French coin is....900-1,000 parts pure.

Thus, it will be seen, that we give 50 parts purer than the American and French coin, and 25 parts purer than the English sterling. We manufacture our own silver ware, and, therefore, guarantee the quality as above, which is the finest that can be made, to be serviceable.

BALL, BLACK & CO., No. 247 Broadway, corner of Murray-st.

N. B.—We have on hand some silver ware, made of the old standard of American coin, which we will sell at reduced prices.

EXTERNAL OR INTERNAL PILES.

A permanent cure for Piles. The Proprietor of DR. WITHERS'S PILE SUPPOSITORY will guarantee to cure any case of External or Internal Piles. Still more wonderful cures effected by using Dr. WITHERS'S PILE SUPPOSITORY:

James W. McKee, shipping merchant, No. 43 Front-st. He was afflicted with them for ten years, and at times confined to bed.

Charles M. Holswell, Esq., Newark, N. J., was operated upon for Piles, but did no good, and was confined to the house for months.

Mr. Michael Doran, No. 255 South st., was afflicted with Piles for 15 years—and was in a miserable condition. Call and see them for yourself. Dépôt, No. 120 Bowery. Medicine can be sent to any part of the country.

A HANDY BOOK ON PROPERTY LAW.

D. APPLETON & CO., Nos. 346 and 348 Broadway, New-York, HAVE JUST PUBLISHED

A HANDY BOOK ON PROPERTY LAW.

By LORD ST. LEONARDS.

One vol. 12mo. Cloth, 75 cents.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

From the Times, Jan. 20.

Less than 200 pages serve to arm us with the ordinary precautions to which we should attend in selling, buying, mortgaging, leasing, settling and devising estates. We are informed of our relations in our property, to our wives and children, and our liabilities to trustees or executors, in a little book for the million, a book which the author invites to the profanum vulgus as even capable of beguiling a few hours in a railway carriage. * * * His authority goes with the work, and makes it more acceptable than a work equally good from a writer more obscure.

From the Examiner, Feb. 13.

These letters, indeed, with the name of Sugden, will be a handy book in half the houses in the land. In easy language, neither dry nor flippant, they give we believe, the best half-crown's worth of information upon worldly matters that a prudent man can buy. We might almost add, he is an imprudent man who does not master its contents.

From the Athenæum, Jan. 9.

The present is indeed "a Handy Book," which all may understand; and we shall hereafter be more pity a gentleman who gets embalmed in one of the legal quicksands before pointed out, than we pity a man who gets into the water in shooting round a dangerous pole.

From the Daily News, Jan. 13.

To show the clear, concise and yet comprehensive style in which the great lawyer writes on law for the million, we extract the following practical directions as to the important act of making a will: * * * With the same honest and homely common sense, the result of profound knowledge of the subject, and an honest desire to be plain, Lord St. Leonards treats of most of the important subjects connected with real property law—Sales and Purchases, Mortgages and Leases, Settlements and Trusts. The public will find it difficult to purchase in any other form so much useful practical knowledge.

From the Sussex Express.

This small work is worth its weight in gold. It is just such a Handy Book as every buyer and seller of land or other property requires * * * Had it been published before, how many families would have been saved the distress and privations they have suffered from the legal disposition of property being contrary to the intention of the donor!

From the Justice of Peace.

* * * There never was a legal work so completely calculated for the million.

From the Law Review.

We think that the noble and very learned author of the little volume before us has done good service to the community, by thus presenting for its use and guidance a popular view of that important and complicated department of our law with which he is admitted by all to be so eminently conversant.

From the Jurist.

Like every work and public act of Lord St. Leonards, busy and useful life, it is distinguished by strong common sense, great knowledge of affairs, and the steady practice of utility to show honest and popularity.

THE MORMONS GO

To Mexico,
And so the war is ended,
But Rescher black,
Our brood attack,
By Red-Bugs we're offended,
What can be done,
Beneath the sun,
To obviate the evil?
Shall we try charms,
Or force of arms
To send them to the d—l?

Just go to Lyon, buy a flask
Of his clever concentrator,
And throw the powder—away task—
With judgment and precision;
You'll see them die,
Bug, Roach or Fly,
The instant that you throw it,
And then his pill
Is sure to kill
The rats and mice that "go it."

CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

The undersigned having witnessed the use of BUNKER'S PATENT LIFE-PRESERVERS, and having examined the construction, desire to express our satisfaction, and call attention to its merits. We believe the article to be a true life-preserver against the contingencies of shipwrecks for

1. It is so buoyant as to leave all the water part of the body above water. It is so fitted to the form of the body, male or female, as not to impede any motion of the limbs, as not to chafe the body, and as not to be in the way of any effort or mode of escape from the water.

2. It is a protection against all blows or checks in the water, whether by the fragments of the wreck or by rocks along the shore, for the buoyant part of the article may not be hurt by any blow on the body, and its buoyancy enables the wearer to touch articles lightly. Puncturing by pins does not destroy its buoyancy.

COUNTRY RESIDENCES.

ELEGANT COUNTRY RESIDENCES
AT NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

Two or three of the most beautiful, highly cultivated, first-class estates in western Massachusetts are offered for sale.

Northampton is one of the most charming spots in America; abounding in rich scenery of river, valley and mountain, resembling, in picturesque and varied landscape, some of the best portions of English scenery.

The town, (which was one of the earliest settlements in New England,) has long been noted for the intelligence and refinement of its society, and possesses, in a high degree, the advantages of literary, educational and religious institutions.

To families desirous of retiring from city life, an opportunity is here presented for securing country seats which are unsurpassed for elegance and comfort. Apply to A. W. THAYER, Northampton, Massachusetts.

COTTAGE FOR SALE AT TARRYTOWN.—A first-class brick Gothic cottage, very eligibly situated, within half a mile of the railroad station and steamboat landing, in the suburbs of this beautiful village, commanding a fine view of the river for many miles. The house is large, containing two fine parlors, with marble mantles, dining-room, library, eight fine bedrooms, kitchen, with cooking range, cellars with hot-air furnace, and abundance of pantries, closets and wardrobes. It was built in the best manner, under the owner's constant inspection, and for his residence, with hollow walls, which effectually exclude dampness, and promote coolness in Summer and warmth in Winter. The lot is large, containing three-quarters of an acre of ground, with profusion of fruit and shade trees and shrubbery, a first-rate garden, a well of superior water, a commodious carriage-house, &c. Will be sold with or without furniture. Possession given at an early day, if desired. Terms, which are moderate, made known on application to
WM. P. LYON, No. 25 Beekman-st., New-York.

OFFICE NEW-YORK AND ERIE RAILROAD CO.,
New-York, June 11, 1858.

THE NEW-YORK AND ERIE RAILROAD Company have currently endeavored during the past year to establish and maintain uniform and reasonable rates of traffic by the four great lines which connect the Atlantic cities and the West. Having failed in this, and believing it to be injudicious and improper to influence traffic by the issue of free passes, by the employment of runners and solicitors or by any other unchanged means, the Company, rather than resort to such means, have determined to restore the rates on and after Monday next, 14th inst., as follows: between
New-York and Dunkirk, is ... $8 00
New-York and Buffalo, is ... 7 00
New-York and Niagara Falls, or Suspension Bridge, is ... 4 00

FOR SAVANNAH A

NEW-YORK CITY.

THE SHIP THAT RAN DOWN THE ISABEL.—The whaling ship Sarah, Capt. Tennant which was in collision with the Isabel Saturday, has lost of her paddle-wheel and mast, arrived at Edgartown on the 22d inst., with 1,400 barrels sperm oil. Another report mentions her arrival at Nantucket on the same day, and alludes to the collision with the brig, but says nothing about the crew.

Coroner's Inquests.

ANOTHER DEATH FROM THE BAXTER-STREET FIRE.—MTR. ANN FURNEY, one of the four persons seriously burned at the late fire in Baxter-street, died yesterday, at the City Hospital. Coroner GAMBLE held an inquest on the body, and the same facts were elicited as at the inquest on Pierre Lorrea, who died from burns received at the same fire. The jury rendered a verdict of "Death from burns accidentally received." The deceased was 48 years of age, and a native of Ireland.

Police Intelligence.

PUSILLANIMOUS HIGHWAYMEN—TWO KNIGHTS OF THE ROAD PUNISHED BY A STRANGER CASE.—At a few minutes to 1 o'clock, yesterday morning, as Mr. G. G. M. Waters, lately door-keeper at Laura Keene's Theatre, was passing through Bleecker-street, near Mott, suddenly two men sprang at him from behind a tree—one catching him around the waist, and the other making a grab at his throat. With a quick and powerful effort, freeing himself several, he managed to fling from him the one who had hold of his waist. Taking from his side-coat pocket a silver spectacle case, he drew his hand back with great emphasis, confronting the other fellow not to advance a step, or he would stab him to the heart. The second fellow evidently mistook the glittering of the spectacle case, in the moonlight, as the gleaming of steel, for in double quick time he took to his heels, followed by his companion, minus fun, as the result proved, had not detracted from his manhoodedness. Mr. Waters let the fellows run, very prudently avoiding imposing a useless task upon his lungs by calling for the police. He thinks they followed him from the theatre for his money, of which he had a considerable amount.

RUINED BY TRYING TO KEEP HIS END UP.—A man by the name of Jacob, named George W. Warren, was committed to the Penitentiary from Special Sessions, in default of a security of a considerable several hundred dollars from Mr. George F. Edgar, wholesale drug merchant, at No. 174 Pearl street. The accused has been in the employ of Mr. Edgar the past three years, and on account of his unusual business tact and industry, had been put forward from time to time, until finally, from entry-clerk he reached the position of assistant-book-keeper. By means of false entries in the books over which he had supervision, he effected the frauds charged against him. Young Warren—he is not yet twenty years of age—confesses the embezzlement and contemplated to having become associated with young men of expensive habits. From a desire "to keep his end up," he says, he appropriated his employer's money, his own salary being inadequate to the last, dashing and gay life of his companions. He now bitterly regrets having succumbed to temptation.

LEAP FROM A THIRD-STORY WINDOW—SAVED BY AN AWNING.—Timothy Sullivan, residing at No. 69 Mulberry-street, carries brick and mortar for a living, and has a large family depending upon his wages for support. His hard work, meagre pay, and wife, have given him a good deal of trouble. In drinking, which not the wife, but the drunkards—he has lately drunk excessively. This drinking brought on a fit of delirium tremens, and at 2 yesterday morning, while under the effects of the delirium, he leaned head foremost from a third-story window. In the descent he fortunately struck an awning, and being uninjured, gave a second leap to the pavement, and ran wildly down the street with nothing but his shirt on. After passing into the Tenth Ward he was caught by two Policemen, who conveyed him to the Essex Market Prison, where he was locked up to get sober and rational.

SCAVENGERS NEARLY SUFFOCATED.—Two German scavengers while at work, at 1 yesterday morning, cleaning an out-house in the rear of No. 453 Hudson-street, narrowly escaped suffocation by putrefactive hydrogen gas. Their groans were heard by people in the vicinity and with some difficulty they were rescued. Following their rescue they were given in charge of some Eighth Ward Policemen, and taken home. On the Eighth Ward return the names of the rescued Germans are not given, while the names of the Policemen are written out with unmistakable clearness.

REINSTATEMENT OF MUNICIPAL POLICE CAPTAINS.—The Police Commissioners at their secret session on Thursday afternoon reappointed as Captains, Ex-Captain Leonard, of the Second Ward, and Ex-Captain Dowling, of the Sixth Ward. No Wards have yet been assigned to the new appointees. It is understood that Captain Dowling will go back to his old Ward. The present appointments make up the complement of Captains for the Metropolitan force.

SUN-STROKES.—Two laborers, named Edward Gannon and Michael Saunder, were sun-struck on Thursday in the Seventh Ward. The first at corner of Pike and South streets, and the latter in Cherry, near Catherine street. After the proper restoratives were applied, they both recovered sufficiently to be taken home.

Mayor's Office.

George Richardson complained on Friday that he bought a passage ticket of John Anderson, No. 162 Warren-street, for a passage by steamer to Havre. He gave Anderson $35 for it, but it proved to be a ticket for a sailing vessel. Officer Blackwell succeeded in effecting the exchange of the ticket.

David Hays and Robert Deale, seamen attached to the United States Frigate Portsmouth, bought bogus tickets for Philadelphia at No. 100 West-street of David Brophy. Officer Baldwin recovered the money and placed the parties on the right track.

SHOPLIFTING.—Joseph Long was brought to the office charged with stealing a coat and pair of shoes from No. 78 Chatham-street, the officers apprehending the prisoner in the act. He was taken before a magistrate and committed to the City Prison for examination.

KNOX'S SENSATIONS.—Every season KNOX produces a sensation with his new style of Hat, and this year the public are dazed with admiration by the neat and tasteful article which he has introduced. If you see a peculiar Hat in Broadway—peculiar not from anything outre in the shape, but from its remarkable beauty—you may be sure that it is Knox's. Call at his store, corner of Broadway and Fulton street, and you will find a large assortment of Hats and Caps for children and adults. Few persons are probably aware of the amount of taste, skill and judgment combined in the designing and manufacture of a Hat, or the years that it is necessary to devote to the art, in order to produce an article of superior excellence. Knox has been for the greater part of his life engaged in the business. He made himself acquainted with all its details, and thus became a thorough proficient in every branch of the art. This knowledge has given him many advantages over others in the trade; because, by superintending the mechanical department himself, he saw that only the best were used, and employed only the best of workmen. In no respect could he be deceived, and of course the natural result followed, and Knox's Hats began to excite public attention from their intrinsic excellence, their superior taste, and remarkable lightness. But this was not enough to satisfy Knox, and feeling that there was a philosophy even in the manufacture of a Hat, he set to work to study it out; and on perfection in the manufacture, he quickly discovered the Hat that satisfied styles of faces regularly, or he promptly furnish it. He introduces every season a new style, which invariably becomes the prevailing fashion, and there will always be found at his establishment, and just now particularly so, a vast assortment of coverings for the head, of styles and descriptions to suit all tastes, and at prices to suit all conditions of customers.

TEAS.—The Canton Tea Company have on hand every variety of Teas for Grocers and Tea-dealers and private families. Souchong, Oolong and Young Hyson from 50c. to 40c. Gunpowder and Imperial from 50c. to 60c. All other qualities equally low. Also 5-lb. boxes good Family Tea for $1. Call and examine at No. 125 Chatham-st., between Pearl and Roosevelt-sts.

COATES' IMPROVED PORTABLE GAS WORKS FOR THE COUNTRY—Giving the most beautiful, economical and convenient light ever offered to the public. ANOTHER BRUTAL OUTRAGE.—A stage driver, employed on the Lafayette-avenue line, was arrested yesterday for committing an outrage upon the person of a little girl less than 11 years old. It seems that, on Thursday evening, three girls were playing on the corner of Fulton and Lafayette avenues, when this driver, named JOHN DOLAN, having no passengers, induced them to take a ride. He obtained the assistance of a friend to drive, and got into the carriage with the girls, and after extinguishing the lights committed the outrage. The screams of the girls brought to their assistance Mr. JOHN S. BRADFORD, who landed the fellow over to the Police, and he was committed for examination. The girl has been delirious all the time since.

ANOTHER OUTRAGE.—PATRICK KENNEDY was arrested yesterday, and held to answer a charge of committing an outrage upon the person of CAROLINE BLISS, at No. 110 Raymond-street, Thursday night. WILLIAM WILLIS was also arrested for participating in the outrage.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.—A girl named MARY ELIZABETH DIXSON, 14 years old, attempted to commit suicide on Thursday, by taking laudanum. Failing to accomplish her purpose by that means, she walked to Tenement's Wharf and deliberately jumped into the water. She was rescued by Officer FARNAM of the Second Precinct, and taken to her residence, No. 24 Hicks street. Unrequited affection is said to have been the cause of the attempt.

THE HEAT.—Several persons were prostrated by the heat yesterday, but thus far we have heard of no death resulting therefrom.

ARSON.—HENRY MILLER, indicted for an attempt to commit arson, corner of Henry and Cranberry-streets, was tried in the Court of General Sessions yesterday, and found guilty. He was immediately sentenced to five years' imprisonment in the State Prison at Sing Sing, by Judge MOSES.

Agricultural Prospects in New-Jersey.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

ANCHORAGE FARMERS, Wednesday, June 23, 1858.

I yesterday and day before, enjoyed a ride of observation through Morris, Somerset and Hunterdon counties—embracing the finest farming district of New-Jersey.

The surpassing beauty of a highly cultivated agricultural district in the month of June, I will not dwell on. It is not of the pleasures of the ride, nor of the beauty of the country passed over—merely as such—that I would speak; but it is of far greater interest to earnest, business-men of every class to hear, viz: of the prospects of the agriculturist at this interesting, harvest-approaching season—or, in other words, to answer the question, What old mother earth seems about to bring forth to cheer and satisfy all those who either "eat to live, or "live to eat."

The fields of wheat and rye throughout these counties will, if saved from mildew and insect, far surpass the crops of any previous year. Say to a farmer, "Sir, you have a fine field of wheat there," and the almost invariable answer is, "Yes—but wheat's good a'most all over, this year." If other sections come in as well, flour will be still cheaper this time twelve-month.

Grass, which is just beginning to fall before the "mower," is very abundant. The frequent rains during the whole Spring have brought a luxuriant growth; the usual lofts and ricks will be more than filled.

Oats and Barley have also enjoyed the "rainy season," and show their appreciation by beginning "to head" much nearer on a level with tops of fences than is usual for those "smaller craft" of grasses. Cornfields are not so encouraging; much was planted very late; and from present appearances farmers in this region seem to have planted the "little kind" this year. However, color is good, and the hot sun of 10 days past has brought forward the little, but important plant, surprisingly; and if frosts are lenient and leisurely in coming next Fall, corn, too, will have to groan beneath their burdens; all for the good of man and beast. GRATITUDE.

The Rev. Ralph Hoyt's Church.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I am persuaded that the many friends of that indomitable and worthy man, the Rev. RALPH HOYT, will rejoice to know that his late great misfortune, the destruction of his church by the tornado, has in no degree disheartened him, or caused him to abandon the pious enterprise in which he had unreservedly embarked nearly all of his own earthly means. The Church which he had built was to be a Free Church, where the poor, as well as the rich, might have the Gospel preached to them. When I called on him yesterday, to express regrets for his loss, he replied, "Yes, all my labors and gains of many years are down, but as I am not down myself, there is nothing left for me to do but to go to work and rebuild the fallen temple." He showed me several letters received by mail, inclosing sums of money from one dollar up to ten, amounting to the gross sum of $23. And it is worthy of notice that several of these letters were from parties who do not belong to the Episcopal denomination. We noticed one from the venerable Dr. NOTT, of Union College, which contained both money and the expression of profound respect and sympathy. There was one of the same kind from "A Quaker," of Philadelphia. These are gratifying evidences of the unsectarian tendencies of the Christian mind of our country. Bishop DOANE and Ex-Governor PRICE, of New-Jersey have addressed Mr. HOYT in language which breathes a spirit of profound respect and brotherly sympathy; and every good man will hope that this feeling will prevail so generally that a sum may be contributed which will secure the speedy rebuilding of the church. Affairs in Texas

Dates from Galveston are to the 14th inst. The corn and pecan crops are said to be very large. Cotton looks fine, and wheat promises an abundant return.

By a private letter received from New-Mexico, the Texan learns that there is great excitement in that section of the country in regard to the new mines of gold and silver lately discovered there. Many will amass fortunes in a short time. WM. GUNNY, formerly a citizen of San Antonio, and who now keeps a hotel at Tucson, lately fought a duel there, killing his adversary.

The Houston Republic says that the Central road will be finished to Hempstead this week.

The Brenham Eagemier mentions a difficulty at Round Top, Fayette County, in which two lives were lost. It appears that a man named MCLANE struck C. E. JONES on the back of the head with a club, breaking his neck. MCLANE was shot in endeavoring to make his escape.

On Saturday night, the 20th ult., a party of armed men, about thirty in number, disguised in black and white masks, visited the Mission of San Jose, four miles from San Antonio, and seized PEDRO LOREA, RICARDO ESPELARS, PABLO LEMOSELA and FRANCISCO HUIDAR. The two first were found sleeping in the open air, and to take the others the party entered a house in which lay the corpse of a child, watched by some women. They proceeded a short distance with their prisoners, and next morning the bodies of the four men named were discovered hanging, two upon one tree and two upon another. They were charged with being horse thieves, and it is stated that three of them were but recently returned from the Penitentiary.

Leaving San Jose, the same party proceeded to the Mission of Espada, where they visited the house of TEODORA GARCIA. Two of GARCIA's sons were sleeping in front of the house; being aroused they defended themselves. Several shots were fired on both sides, hearing which the old man hastened to the door and exclaimed that they were killing his boys, when he was shot through the head and instantly killed. The sons made their escape. The Ledger denounces the perpetrators, and comments with just severity upon these outrages.

A True Heroine.

From the Bloomington (Ill.) Pantagraph.

MRS. CAROLINE C. STRANEBERG, wife of P. P. STRANEBERG, of this city, was a passenger on the Pennsylvanian, which was burned to the water's edge in the Mississippi, sixty miles below Memphis, on Sunday morning, 13th instant. Mrs. S. left her berth just before the explosion took place, and when she heard the report, which shook every piece of timber in the boat, she caught hold of her little child, which was only two months old, and pushed into the ladies' cabin at the very moment that a large piece of the chimney came rushing through the floor. She ran to the captain's room and told him that the boat was on fire, but he said she was mistaken, and advised her to be calm. She said she was not mistaken, and her manner was so earnest that the captain thinking she might be correct, went down to the boiler deck. He returned in a short time, and remarked to Mrs. S., "There is no danger now; the fire has been subdued." Mrs. S., however, would not be convinced; she insisted that the boat was in flames, and told the Captain to make preparations for saving the passengers. As she finished speaking, the flames broke through the cabin floor, and in less than a minute the cabin was filled with smoke. She says that the time for action had arrived, and she knew that her life and that of her child depended upon her own exertions, so she went down the private staircase, and was fortunate enough to reach the boiler-deck in safety. Knowing that she would perish by fire if she stayed on the boat, she determined to leave it, and run the risk of meeting her death by another method. She accordingly seized a board about seven feet long and eight or ten inches wide, and, grasping her child with one arm and the board with the other, plunged into the river.

The current, owing to the high stage of water, was very rapid, and Mrs. S. had as much as she could do to keep herself and child above the surface; but she proved equal to the dangerous situation in which she was placed, and her perilous journey would not have been attended with half the danger that it was, if her unselfish heart had not prompted her to save a man who was unable to save himself. A short time after leaving the boat, she saw a man struggling in the water, and she knew from his movements that he was too much exhausted to save himself from going to the bottom; and she generously and nobly jeopardized her life to save his; she grasped him by the arm, at the risk of being pulled from her frail support, and assisted him in getting upon a little piece of plank that was hardly sufficient to keep herself and child above the surface of the Father of Waters.

After floating for an hour and a half, the three were rescued by some men, who, having heard the explosion, launched a small boat and started up stream to render assistance to the unfortunate sufferers. When the man who was rescued by Mrs. STRANEBERG placed his feet in the boat, he tried to express the gratitude which he felt for his preserver; but his heart was so full of thankfulness that his tongue refused to give utterance to his grateful feelings. Mrs. STRANEBERG left this city about three months ago, and went to Clinton, Miss., her birth-place, where her relatives reside. She took passage on the Pennsylvanian, at Vicksburg, and was fortunate enough to arrive at her own house in this city on Monday evening. Her conduct entitles her to the admiration of all who can appreciate a noble act.

Upwards of thirty-five schooners from the outports sailed from Halifax to Labrador in two days of last week. From La Havre and its neighborhood alone upwards of 400 men have gone out.

COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS.

For Markets see Third Page.

FRIDAY, June 25—P. M.

The Street is generally dull to-day. There is not much doing in Money negotiations, and at the Stock Exchange the buoyancy in the dealings yesterday was quite lost, after the first call of the list at the early or morning Board. This was partly owing, no doubt, to the rapidity in an advance on several of the Railway stocks the previous two days, which, besides bringing forward some few sellers of cash stock, induced a decided effort on the Bear account to resist and turn the rise. The result was a much lighter business than on Wednesday and Thursday, and lower prices at the close of the session by ¼@½ ⅌ cent. on New-York Central, 1 ⅌ cent. lower on Rock Island, ¼@½ lower on Toledo, ¼ on Reading, and ½@1 ⅌ cent. on Galena. On the State list, Missouris showed increased firmness, selling at 87¾ ⅌ cent., and some further sales of La Crosse Land Grants were made at 33¾@¾ ⅌ cent. Pacific Mail shares were ¼@½ ⅌ cent. higher; Delaware and Hudson steady, and all the City Bank and Avenue Road shares firm and in continued demand. The General Market, after the adjournment, was tame and inactive on the Street, and at the Second Board this feeling was availed of by the operators against the rise to make lower prices on most of the speculative shares—the actual business done, however, being moderate, and the General Market closing steady. New-York Central, 82½@¾; Reading, 44¼@½; Rock Island, 72½@72¾; Galena, 84@84½, and Toledo, 32½@¼. These rates leave a loss from the highest points of Thursday's market of 1@1½ ⅌ cent. At the afternoon Board there were sales of $70,000 Michigan Sixes at 87½, and $10,000 Virginias at 96 ⅌ cent.

The business in Foreign Bills for the steamer Arago, sailing to-morrow, was quite moderate, owing to the very recent departure of the direct English mail by the Cunarder of Wednesday last. On London, the transactions were in bank-names at 109¼@109½, and in France at f.5.12½ to the dollar—the latter contracted by a few leading drawers and held firm.

At the Stock Exchange, to-day, Mr. JOHN A. ISELIN, of DELANEY, ISELIN & CLARK, who lost his seat at the Board during the crisis of last Autumn, was restored to membership by the complimentary vote of Yeas 82, Nays 3.

On the 1st of July, the Bank of Commerce will pay the half-yearly interest then due on the Public Debt of Missouri; the Bank of the State of New-York will pay for the Commonwealth of Virginia; the Merchants' Bank for the State of Tennessee; the Bank of the Republic for the States of North Carolina and Georgia, and the Bank of America for the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

The New-Amsterdam Insurance Company has declared a semi-annual dividend of 8 ⅌ cent., payable July 1. The Bank of America, of this city, a semi-annual dividend of 3½ ⅌ cent., payable July 1.

There is some complaint, to-day, among disappointed applicants, that the Canal Fund Commissioners at Albany, yesterday, should have awarded the whole of the $1,500,000 Loan to Mr. KING and his associates at 101½, while a large amount was bid for above this rate. The question is a very nice one where, as in the present instance, the public credit and dignity of the State of New-Yorke seems to be involved. If citizens A. B. C., &c., show their readiness, as moneylenders, to set a higher value upon the State 5 ⅌ cents than K. and his associates in the combination bid, it would seem reasonable that they should be accommodated to the extent of their offers. But, say Messrs. KING Co. to the Fund Commissioners, if you will not give us the whole Loan at our combination bid, we take none. And then the Commissioners set about to calculate the profit or loss of awarding $1,500,000 at 101½, or $830,000 above, and $670,000 below that premium; leaving $550,000 for a second distribution, by public advertisement—the combination bid being thrown out, by its own request or terms, altogether. It seems under this statement of the case that the Commissioners, finding only one-fifth the loan bid for above the conditional offer of KING & Co., felt it their duty to the State to accept this offer. They had precedent for this, though our recollection is that the precedent was made with considerable reluctance, and not until after one or two conditional bids had been rejected. The principle is not altogether a right one, in a public view of the case, and the Secretary of the U. S. Treasury has positively refused to adopt it under every temptation in awarding Treasury Bills. The query in the present instance suggests itself—would the associates of Mr. KING have entered into this combination but from the knowledge that the bid might be made to win? In other words, if the understanding had been that the Canal Fund Commissioners would award only so much at 101½ as had not been bid for above that premium, would not the Banks of Commerce, New York, Republic, &c., have offered on their separate account, and in competition with each other and with Mr. KING?

The Albany papers afford the following return of the Canal Receipts at tide-water, for the third week in June, and for the season, in the articles of Flour and Grain:

Week.	Flour, bbls.	Wheat, bu.	Corn, bu.	Barley, bu.
1857	28,930	177,545	146,522	7,735

The Cincinnati Gazette says of the Crop prospects in that quarter:

"Another week of extremely favorable crop weather has been experienced, and although discouraging reports continue to reach us from some sections, the prospects, on the whole, are far more flattering than, a fortnight ago, we had any reason to anticipate. Corn is progressing rapidly wherever it is above ground, and in many cases where the rain prevented planting, or washed out the grain, farmers are putting in seed obtained from the North. This will mature in from sixty to eighty days.

Notwithstanding the backward condition of the crop at this time, we may, should the weather continue favorable, look for a fair yield in the leading corn-growing States. With regard to wheat, we expressed the opinion some time ago that the yield would not be much over half an average crop. From recent developments, however, we feel warranted in saying that three-fourths, if not a full average crop, will be secured. Harvesting has commenced in Kentucky. The rust appeared in some localities, but it did not injure the crop seriously. In Southern Illinois harvest is also commenced. In the section of Ohio operations will commence next week. Barley has been secured in Kentucky, and it is being cut in this State, Indiana and Illinois. Oats, potatoes and hay promise well. We speak now of the prospects of the general result. In many sections there will be serious deficiencies, not only in corn, but also in most descriptions of small grain; but the general average promises to be a fair one. Should the weather hereafter continue so as not to interfere with the favorable progress of the growing crops, our people will have no cause to complain of a deficiency in the supplies of any of the necessaries of life."

BANKING AND FINANCIAL ADVERTISEMENTS

METROPOLITAN BANK, No. 198 BROADWAY,
NEW-YORK, June 23, 1858.

☞ DIVIDEND NOTICE.—The Directors of the METROPOLITAN BANK have this day declared a semi-annual dividend of four per cent, payable on and after the 1st Monday of July proximo. The Transfer Books will be closed from the 24th inst. till the day of payment.
By order. GEO. I. BENEDICT, Cashier.

Real Estate—FRIDAY, June 25.

Thirty-fifth-street.—Mr. J. M. MILLER, by order of the executors of ARCHER LEAKY, sold a lot on the north side of Thirty-fifth-street, 111 feet west of Eighth-avenue, 20 feet from Twelfth rear, by 66.9 deep, to a Mr. Jay J. DUSS, for $3,450.

Fifty-third-street.—Mr. LUDLOW sold, under foreclosure, a three-story high-stoop brick house, on the north side of Fifty-third-street, 100.8 west of Broadway, lot 25x100.5, to GEO. A. ALLEN, for $1,050 above a mortgage of $2,500—say for $3,150.

One Hundred and Nineteenth and One Hundred and Twentieth streets.—Mr. A. H. MULLER sold an irregular plot of ground near the west side of Fourth avenue, on the north side of One Hundred and Nineteenth-street, equal to about 12 full lots, for the sum of $3,250—say $300 per lot. Also, in the rear of the above, south side of One Hundred and Twentieth-street, 140 feet west of Fourth-avenue, what is equal to about eight lots, for $1,100—say $137 per lot. This property is near Mount Morris, and if we remember rightly, lies considerably above the grade.

Sixth-street.—Messrs. RATHER & BLAGGWELL have sold a full sized lot on the west side of Sixth-avenue, 75.5 feet south of Fiftieth-street, the property of STEPHEN C. WHEELER, Esq., bought by Mr. JOHN MURPHY, for $3,000.

Thirty-fourth-street.—Mr. JOSEPH H. GOSWIN, wagon-maker, No. 144 Elizabeth-street, has bought Mr. JOSEPH L. PALMER's two lots on the north side of Thirty-fourth-street, adjoining the Tabernacle, for what we consider about $9,000 each. Mr. GOSWIN actually gave $9,000 in cash, and also gives in addition, twelve lots of ground between Eighty-seventh and Eighty-eighth streets, being the whole front on the east side of Twelfth-avenue, and four interior lots on the south side of Eighty-eighth-street. They have cost Mr. GOSWIN over $12,000. There are some improvements on them.

The lots on Thirty-fourth-street Mr. GOSWIN will probably improve, as there has not been a time in some years when both labor and building materials were so low, and when buildings could be constructed so cheaply as at the present time.
